GOVERNMENT OF INDIA

DEPARTMENT OF ARCHAEOLOGY

CENTRAL ARCHÆOLOGICAL LIBRARY

CALL NO. 891.5 BED.
AGE No. 19965

D.G.A. 79.
GIPN-S4-2D G Aich N D /57.-25-9 58-1.00,000.

(Asiatic Society's Monographs -vel. 6).

THE

CHAHAR MAQALA

("FOUR DISCOURSES")

NIDHÁMÍ-I-'ARÚDÍ-I-SAMARQANDÍ.

TRANSLATED INTO ENGLISH

VARD G. BROWNE, M.A., M.B., FELLOW OF PENDROKE COLLEGE, CAMBRID

19965

[Reprinted from the Journal of the Royal Asiatio Society, July and October 1899. 162 Beking

440/08.

A348

HERTFORD: RINTED BY STEPHEN AUSTIN AND SONS.

1899.

Date: 26.7-63.

CALL No. - 894-05

ACS APPEN WOLL AND BY

URITHERS, BERTFORD,

CONTENTS..

13

TRANSLATOR'S PREPAGE	1-7
(INCLUDING TABLE OF CONTENTS)	2-5
	7-22
First Discourse: Secretaries	2-42
SECOND DISCOURSE: POETS	2-87
THIRD DISCOURSE: ASTROLOGERS 88-	-106
FOURTH DISCOURSE: PHYSICIANS 106-	-132
Conclusion	132
COLOPHON OF THE THERAN EDITION	-134
Inner	135

THE CHAHÁR MAQÁLA.

In my article on The Sources of Dawlatshah, which appeared in the January number of the Journal, I have already spoken of the excellent work which I now have the pleasure to present in English dress. For my translation I have used the Tihraa lithographed edition of A.H. 1305, which I have carefully collated throughout with the older of the two British Museum MSS. (Or. 3,507, dated A.U. 1017), and, in all doubtful passages, with the second MS. (Or. 2,955, dated A.H. 1274) also. These MSS. are fully described in Rien's Persian Supplement, pp. 244-245 and 265, Nos. 390 and 418. It remains only to say a few words concerning the author and the book.

The Chahar Magata contains, as its name implies, four discourses, each of which treats of a class of mon deemed by the author indispensable for the service of kings, to wit, (1) scribes (dubirán) or secretaries; (2) poets; (3) astrologers; and (4) physicians. Euch discourse begins with certain general considerations on the class in question, which are afterwards illustrated by anecdotes, drawa, in large measure, from the personal reminiscences of the author, who was himself a court-poet and a frequenter of royal The total number of these accedetes, which assemblies. coostitute at once the most entertaining and the most valuable portion of the hook, is about forty, an averago of ten to each "discourse." So far as I know, only two of them, one coacerniag Firdawsi and the other about 'Uroar Khayyam, have hitherto been cited from this work. 'Of these the first (translated by Ethé in vol. xlviii of the Z.D.M.G., pp. 89-94) was taken, not from the Chahar Maqala itself, but from Ibn Islandiyar's History of Tubaristan, where it is quoted in extenso; while the second seems to have been known only in abridged citations, the misunderstanding of which gave rise to the Rose-troo cult of the 'Umar Khayyam Society, referred to at p. 414 of the April number of the Journal.

Of the excellent style of the Chahar Maqala, a style at once strong, concise, and pregnant with meaning, though not always easy or simple, I have already spoken at pp. 40, 53, 56-57, and 61-69 of the January number of the Journal, so that there is no occasion to insist upon it further. As, however, my translation will occupy two numbers of the Journal, it may be convenient that I should here give a brief table of its contents.

INTRODUCTORY (Tihrán ed., pp. 1-27).

(1) Doxology, and Dedication to the Ghurid Prince Abu'l-Hasan 'Ali b. Mas'ud, son of Fukhru'd-Din Mus'ud, brother of Shamsu'd-Din Muhammod, and nephew of "the World-consumer" (Jahan-suz) 'Ala'u'd-Din Husayn who reigned a.D. 1149-1170 (pp. 1-6).

(2) Beginning of the book. The author here gives his full name as Ahmad b. 'Umar b. 'Ali an-Nidhami os-Samarqandi, and states that he has been in the service of the House of Ghur for forty-five years (pp. 6-7).

(3) Excursus i, on the different grades of Being, and the Creation and Disposition of the World (pp. 7-11).

(4) Excursus ii, on the Development of the Mineral, Vegetable, and Animal Kingdoms (pp. 11-14).

(5) Exeursus iii, on the Evolution, Faculties, and Senses (internal and external) of Man; the three classes of men; and the Kingly and Prophetic Offices (pp. 14-26), including—

(6) Anecdots i, on the Nasnás, or Wild Man (pp. 20-21), and ending with-

(7) Plan of work and brief statement of contents (pp. 26-27).

193

FIRST DISCOURSE: SECRETARIES (pp. 27-59).

Nature of the Secretarial Function and Qualifications of the Perfect Serihe (pp. 27-33).

Anecdote ii, concerning Jekufi (pp. 33-36).

Aneodolo iii, on Iskáfi's desputch announcing the defeat of Mákán (pp. 36-40).

Anecdote iv, showing that a Secretary of Stato should not be exposed to dimestic worry (pp. 40-42).

Anecdote v, concerning the Sahib Isma'll ibn 'Abbad (pp. 42-43).

Anecdote vi, concerning Alimad Havan of Maymand and the Langhan deputies (pp. 43-46).

Anecdote vii, concerning al-Ma'mun's wedding (pp. 46-51).

Anecdote viii, concerning al-Mustarshid's oration against the Selfings (pp. 51-53).

Ancedote ix, concerning the Gur Khan (pp. 53-54).

Anecdote x, concerning the supernatural elequence of the Qur'an (pp. 54-55).

Ancedote xi, concerning Muhammad b. 'Abda'llah, Bughra Khan's secretary (pp. 55-59).

Second Discourse: Poers (pp. 59-113).

Nature of the Poetic Art, and Qualifications of the Expert Poet (pp. 59-69), including—

Anecdole xii, concerning Ahmad b. 'Abdu'llah of Khujistan (pp. 59-61), and—

List of the emment pacts who have shed lustro on the courts of the various Persum dynasties down to the author's time (pp. 62-64).

Anesdote xiii, concerning Rúdagi's skill in improvisation (pp. 69-76).

Aneedote xiv, concerning Mahmud and Ayaz, and 'Unsurt's improvisation (pp. 76-79).

Anecdote xv, concerning Farrukhi's improvisation (pp. 79-87).

¹ p. 31 is by mistake omitted in the pagination, which, for convenience of reference, I have followed without correction.

Anecdote xvi, concerning the author's early struggles, and Mu'izzi's counset and encouragement (pp. 87-93).

Anacdote xvii, concerning the anger of Tughan Shah and Azraqi's improvisation (pp. 93-95).

Anecdote xviii, concerning the imprisonment of Mas'nd-i-Sa'd-i-Salmán and others by Sultán Ibráhim (pp. 97-98).

Anecdote xix, concerning Am'aq and Rushill (pp. 98-101).

Ancodole xx, concerning Findancei (pp. 101-109).

Anecdote xxi, autobiographical (pp. 109-113).

THIRD DISCOURSE: ASTROLOGERS (pp. 113-138).

Nature of Astrology, and Qualifications of the Expert Astrologer (pp. 113-115).

Anecdote xxii, concerning Ya'qub b. Ishaq al-Kindi (pp. 115-118).

Anecdote xxiii, concerning Sulfon Mahmud and Abu Rayhan al-Biruni (pp. 118-123).

Anecdote xxiv, concerning the skill possessed by an old woman in the author's service in the Lore of the Stars (pp. 123-125).

Anecdoto xxv, concerning Mahmud Da'udi, the crazy sooth-sayer (pp. 125-128).

Aneodole xxvi, concerning al-Mausill, the Astrologer, and the Nidhamu'l-Mulk (pp. 128-130)

Ancodoto xxvii, concerning omar Khaynam's prediction as to his place of buriot (pp. 130-131).

Anécdote xxviii, concerning a weather forecast made by 'Umar Khayyam (pp. 131-133).

Anecdote xxix, concerning a vagrant and irresponsible Astrologer (pp. 133-136).

Anecdote xxx, concerning a successful prognostication made by the author (pp. 136-138).

FOURTH DISCOURSE: PHYSICIANS (pp. 138-173).

Nature of the Science and Art of Medicine, and Qualifications of the Physician (pp. 138-141).

Anecdote xxxi, concerning faith-healing (pp. 141-146), including a dissertation on the most excellent works on Medicine, and the pre-eminence of Avicenna.

Anecdote xxxii, concerning a heroic cure wrought by Bukht-Yishù' (pp. 146-147).

Anecdote xxxiii, concerning a remarkable cure of Rheumatism (pp. 147-149).

Ancedote xxxiv, concerning another remarkable cure effected by Muhammad Zakariyyá ar-Rázi by the instrumentality of mental emotion (pp. 149-154).

Anecdots xxxv, concerning the adventures and the skill of Axicenna (pp. 154-163).

Anecdote xxxvi, concerning a heroic oure wrought by 'Adudu'd-Dawla's physician Kamiln's-Sana'at (pp. 163-165).

Anecdote xxxvii, concerning a remarkable cure of Melancholia effected by Ariconna (pp. 165-168).

Anecdote xxxviii, concerning the restoration to life of a man apparently dead by Adib Isma'il (pp. 168-169).

Anecdote xxxix, concerning the reproof addressed by a physician to a theologian whom he had saved from imminent death (pp. 169-170).

Anecdoto xl, concerning a cure effected by Galon (pp. 170-171). Anecdote xli, concerning o remarkable oure wrought by the author (pp. 171-173).

Conclusion (pp. 173-174).

Postscript by the editor of the Tihran edition (pp. 174-176).

As regards the author, Nidhami-i-'Arudi of Samarqand, he will best reveal himself by his own numerous allusions to his career and adventures. His present work was written, at least in part, during the lifetime of 'Alá'u'd-Dín Husayn Jahán-súz ("the World-consumer"), who died in A.D. 1161, and since he speaks of himself as having been forty-five years in the service of the House of Ghúr, it is evident that he must have been horn towards the end of the eleventh century of our era. The chief dates which he gives in the autobiographical portions of his work are as follows. In A.H. 504 (A.D. 1110-1111) he boord traditions concerning Rúdagí ot Samarqond (Anecdote xiii). In A.H. 506 (A.D. 1112-1113) he mot 'Umar Khoyyam at Níshápúr (Ancedoto xxvii). In A.H. 509 (A.D. 1115-1116) ho was at Horat (Anecdote xvii). In the following year ho was at Nishapur (Anocdoto i) ond Tus (Anecdutes xvi and xx), where he visited Firdaysi's temb. His position and income were at this time precarious, but, encouraged by the poet Mu'izzi, he succeeded in attracting the king's notice and winning his opproval. In A.H. 512 (A.D. 1118-1119) he was sgain at Nishapur (Ancedoto xxxi), ond onco more in A.H. 530 (A.n. 1135-1136), whom he visited 'Umar Khayyam's gravo, and remarked the fulfilment of the prediction uttered by the Astronomer-poet twenty-four years earlier (Anecdote xxvii). In A.H. 547 (A.D. 1152-1153) he was involved in the defeat of the army of Ghur by Sonjor h. Moliksháh the Seljúq, ond was for o while in hiding at Herát (Anecdotes xxx and xli). His life, in short, seems to have been spent chiefly in Khurasan at reyal courts, where he had opportunities of meeting meny noteworthy persons. Though a poet by profession, he seems to hove been equally ready to practise Astrology (Anecdoto xxx) and Medicine (Anecdoto xli). Of his personal character, as of his obility, his work produces, on the whole, a very favourable impression, and the book itself I should be disposed to describe as one of the most interesting, the most instructive, the most charming, and the hest written Persion prose works which it has been my fortune to come across. Of this, however, the reader shall judge for himself.

Notices of the writer occur in 'Awfi'a Lubábu'l-Albáb (ch. x, § 2, Poets of Transoxanie), from which we learn nothing about his personality save that he here the lagab of Najmu'd-Dín; Dawlatsháh's Tadhkhra (Tobaqa i, No. 13, pp. 60-61 of my forthcoming edition), where laudotory mention is made of the Chahar Maqála; Hájí Kholífa (No. 4,348, s.v. عبار مقال), who calls him Nidhámu'd-Din (instead of Najmu'd-Din), which is probably correct; the Majma'u'l-Fuşaḥā of that most accomplished of recent Persian writers, Ridá-qulí Khán (vol. i, p. 635), who places him higher as a prose-writer than as a poot; and, no doubt, other biographical works. But, leaving these aside, let us now allow the author to speak for himself, only promising that, where reference is made to various readings, the older MS. (Or. 3,507) is denoted by A, the other MS. (Or. 2,955) by B, and the Tihrán lithographed edition by L.

THE FOUR DISCOURSES (CHARLAR MAQALA) DE NIDHAMI-I-'ARUŅI-I-SAHARQANDI.

In the Name of God, the Merciful, the Clement.

Praise and thanks and glory to that King who, by the instrumentality of the Cherubin and Augele of the Spirit World, brought into being the World of Return and Restoration, and, by means thereof, created and adorned the World of Becoming and Decay, maintaining it by the Command and Probibition of the Prophets and Saints, and restraining it by the swords and pons of Kings and Ministers. And blessings upon the Lord of both worlds, who was the most perfect of the Prophets, and invocations of grace upon his Companions and those of his Household, who were the most excellent of Saints and Vicars. And honour to the King of this time, that learned, just, divinelyfavoured, victorious, and heaven-aided monarch, Husamu'd-Dawla wa'd - Din, Helper of Islam and the Muslims, Exterminator of the infidels and polytheists, Subduer of the heretical and the froward, Supporter of hosts in the worlds, Pride of Kings and Emperors, Succourer of mankind. Protector of these days, Fore-arm of the Caliphate, Beauty of the Faith and Glory of the Nation, Order of the Arabs and the Porsians, noblest of nankind, Shamsu'l-Ma'ali, [&]quot; L. has المتا " without the intervention."

Maliku'l-Umara, Ahu'l-Hassa 'Ali b. Mas'ud, Help of the Prince of Believers, may his life bo filled with euccoss, may the greater part of the world he assigned to his name, and may the ordering of the affairs of Adam'e seed bo directed by his caro! For to-day he is the most excellent of the kings of the age in nobility, pedigreo, doughty deeds, judgement, statesmanship, justice, equity, valour, and generosity, as well as in the adorning of his territory, the embellishment of his realins, the maintenance of his friends, the subjugation of his foes, the raising of armies, the safeguarding of the people, the securing of the reads, and the tranquilizing of the realms,2 and also in that upright judgement, clear understanding, strong resolvo, and firm determination, by the excellence of which the concatenation of the House of Shansah 3 is held togother and maintained in order, and hy the perfection of which the strong arm of that Dynasty is strongthened and braced. May God Almighty give him full portion, tognther with the other kings of that line, of dominion and domain, and throne and fortune, by Ilis Favour and Ilis Grace!

But to proceed. It is an old custom and nacient practice, which custom is maintained and observed, that the Anthor, in the introduction to his discourse and preface of his hook, should commomorate somewhat of his patron's praise, and record some prayer on bohalf of the object of his eulogy. But I, a loysl servent, instead of praise and prayer for this prince, will make mention in this hook of those favours ordained and vouchasfed by God Almighty to this King of kingly parentage, that, these being submitted to his world-illuminating judgement, he may betake himself to the expression of his thanks for them. For in the uncreated Scripture and unmade Word, God says, " Verily if ye be thankful, We will give unto you increase"; for the gratitude of the servant is an ulchemy for the favours of the Munificent Lord. Briefly, then, it behaves this great King and puissant Prince to know that to-day, upon the whole of this globe of dust, and within the circle of this green framment,2 there is no king in more ample circumstances than this monarch, nor any potentate enjoying more abundant good than this sovereign. He bath the gift of youth and the blessing of constant health; his father and mother are alive; congenial brothers ore on his right hand and on his loft. And what father is like his sire, the mighty, divinely-strengthened, over-victorious, beaven-aided Fakhru'd - Darda wa'd - Din, 5 Prince of tho realms of Iran, King of the Mountains (muy God prolong his continuance and continue to the heights his exaltation!), who is the most puissant of the monarchs of the age, and the most excellent of the princes of the time in judgement, statecraft, knowledge, chivalry, swordsmanship, strongth of arm, treasure, and muniment! Supported by ten thousand men bearing spears and handling reine, he hath made himself a shield before his sons, so that no disturbing blast of the zophyr may so much as blow on one of their sorvants. Under his high protection and unascallable procaution (may God increase their degree!), prayers, of which each clause is breathed upwards ut full morning-tide to the Court of God, co-operate with a far-trailing host and wheeling army. What a brother, too, like the reval Prince Shamsu'd-Danda wa'd-Din, Light of Islam and the Muslims (may his victories be rendered glorious 1), who reaches the extreme limit of endcavour in the service of this my master (whose exaltation may God perpetuate!), Praise he to God that this my muster omits naught either

This Prince belonged to the Bamiyan line of the Gharid Dynasty, was the son of Fakhru'd-Din Mas'ad, and brother of Shamsu'd-Din Mulammad, and flourished in the latter part of the sixth century of the hyra.

³ L. has alle jl, "from perils," instead of alle.

² See Tabaqat-i-Napri (ed. Nassau Lees), p. 101 ut seqq. The correct reading is found only in A. B. has السانية, L. ال

¹ Qur'an, xiv, 7.

[&]quot;A. has مجرخ, "umbrella," for چرخ, "firmament."

³ Fakhru'd-Din Mas'ad b. 'Ixxu'd-Din Ilnsan, A.n. 550 (A.D. 1155).

⁴ L. om. " ten."

in reward or retribution l¹ And a favour yet greater is this, that the All-Perfect Benefactor and Unchanging Giver hath bestowed on him an unclo like the Lord of the World and Sovereign of the East, 'Alá'u'd-Dunyá ua'd-Din Ahá 'Alí al-Ḥusayn b. al-Ḥusayn,' Ikhtiyaru Amiri'l-Mü'munia (may God prolong his life' and cause his kingdom to ondure!), who, with fifty thousand mail-clad men, stronuous in endeavour, oblitornted the hosts of the world, und set in a corner all the kings of the oge. May God (blessed and exalted is He!) long vouchsafe all to one another, and give all long enjoyment of one another's company, and fill the world with light by their achievements, hy His Favour, and Bounty, and Grace!

Broinning of the Book.

Your loyal servant end faithful retainer Ahmad b. 'Umar' b. 'Alí an-Nidhamí al-'Arúdí os-Samarqandi, who for forty-fivo years hath been devoted to the service of this House and inscribed in the register of the vassals of this Dynasty, desireth to render a service to the Supreme Imperial Conrt (may God exalt it!), and to set forth, according to the canons of Philosophy, duly adorned with decisive proofs, trenchant arguments and sound counsel, what kingship truly is, who is truly king, whonce is derived this honourable office, to whom rightly appertaineth this favour, and in what manner one ought to show one's gratitude for, and after what fashion accept, this privilege, so as to be second to the Lord of the children of men oud third to the All-Provider of the Universe; for in the

بلکه جهان روشن بروی او همی بیند و عمر شیرین ۱ A. edds . بجمال او همی گدارد ٬

^{2 &#}x27;AM'u'd-Din Hurayn, called Jahan-eis, "the World-consumer," A n. 644-566.

[&]quot; L. for same has a fe, "his glory."

⁽ بر عمر] L om. [بر

Incontrovertible Scripture and Eternal Word God hath oc-ordinated on one thread the pearls represented by these three exalted titles: "Obey God," eaith IIe, "and obey His Apostle, and such as possess authority amongst yourselves."

Now in the grades of existences and the ranks of the intelligibles, apart from the prophetic function, which is the supreme limit of man's degree, there is no rank higher than severeignty, which is naught else but a Divine gift. God, glerious is His Name, hath accorded this position to the Kiag of the age, and bestowed on him this degree, so that he may walk after the way of fermer kings and maintain the peeple after the manner of bygeae ages.

Excursus I.

The August Discernment (may God exalt it !) must know that every being which inhabits the Universo falls necessarily into one of two categories. Either it is a being which is self-existent, and is called 'the Necessarily Existent,' which is God Almighty, great is His Glory, who existeth by virtue of Himself, and who, therefore, hath existed fer ever, since He dependeth not on aught else; and who was always, siace He subsisteth by Himself, net by another. But that oxistonce whose being is through another is called ' Contingent Being,' and this is such as we are, since our being is from the seed, and the seed is from the blood, and tho blood is from food, and food is from the sun, the earth, the water and the air, which in turn are from something else; and all these are such as yesterday were not, and to-morrow will not be. Now when reflection is carried to the uttermost, it appeareth that this Causal Nexus reacheth upwards to a Cause which derivoth not its being from another, but existeth by itself; and that the Orentor is all, and from Him all derivoth its existence and subsistence. And when this matter is somewhat pondered, it will become clear that Phenomena consist of Being tiactured with Not-being, while He IS by a continuity which reaches from Eternity Past to Eternity to come. And eiace the essence of Phenomena is of Not-being, they must inevitably return again to nothing; and again, as touching the basis of the human race, it is said, "Everything shall return unto its Origin," more especially in this world of Becoming and Deeny. Therefore we, who are centingent in our being, have our origin in Not-being; while He, who existeth necessarily, is the Essence of Being, even as He (glerious is His state) saith in the Perspicuous Word and Firm Support, "All things perish save His Countenance."

Now you must know that this world lies in the hollow of the Heaven of the Moon's and within the circle of this first sphere, end is called "the World of Becoming end Decay." And you must thus conceive it, that within the concavity of the Heaven of the Moon lies the Orb of Fire, round about which extends the Heaven of the Moon; and thet within the Heavon of Fire is the Air, surrounded by the Fire, ead within the Air is the Water, surrounded by the Air, while within the Water is the curth, with the Water round about it. And in the midst of the earth is an imaginary point, from which all straight lines drawn to the Heaven of the Moon are equal; and when we speak of "down," we mean this point and what lies nearest to it; and when we speak of "up," we mean the sphero of the remotest heaven, together with what lies nearest to it. this being a heaven above the Zodiacal Heaven, having neught beyond it, for with it the material world terminates. or comes to an ead.

² Qur'an, xxvili, 88.

This is the lowest or innermost of the nine colestial spheres which environ the earth. Concerning the Muslim Cosmogony, see Dieterici's Makrokasmos, p. 178 et sequ.

⁴ This outermost, or ninth, celestial sphere is the Primum mobile of the Ptolemaic system, the Falsku'l-Aflas or Falsku'l-Aflak of the Muslim philosophers.

Now when God Almighty, by His offcetive Wisdom, desired to produce in this world minerals, plunts, enimals, and mea. He created the stars, and in particular the sun and moon, whereon he made the growth and decay of these to depend. And the special property of the sun is this, that by its roflection it warms all things when it stunds over against thom, and supplies them through a medium with heat, and draws thom up-that is, attracts them. by its juxtaposition, it warmed the water; and by means of the warmth, attracted it; until, in a long while, it laid bare one quarter or more of the earth's surface, hy reason of the much vapour which ascended and rose up therefrom. Now the nature of the water is this, that it can become stone, as it is well known to do in certain places, as may be actually witnessed.1 So mountains were produced from the water and the shining of the sun; and hereby the earth became somewhat raised from what it was, while the water sank and dried up, according to that fashion which is witnessed. This portion, therefore, is called 'the Uncovered Quarter,' for the rousen above stated; and it is also called 'the Inhabited Quarter,' because animals dwell therein.

EXCURSUS II.

When the influences of these stars had acted on the whole of these elements, they were reflected back from the midst of the earth and water, from that imaginary point [mentioned above], by the aid of the fire and wind, and the phenomena of the inorganic world were produced, such as mountains and mines, clouds, lightning, thunder, thunderholts, shooting stars, comets, meteors, , halos, conflagrations, earthquakes, and all manner of fountains, as has been fully explained in works trouting of the effects of the colestial bodies, but for the explanation and discussion of which there is no room in this brief manual. But when time began, and the cycles of heaven became continuous, and the composition of this lower world became matured, and the time was come for the fertilization of that interspace which lay between the water and the air, the vegotable world was munifested. Then God, blossed and exalted is He, orosted for that substance whereby the plants wore made manifest four subservient forces and three faculties. Of these four subserviout forces, and was that which kept drawing to it whatever was suitable for its purpose, and this is called 'Attraction' (Jadhiba). Another keeps what the first may have attracted, and this is called 'Fixation' (Másika). The third is that which assimilates what has been attracted, and transmutes it from its formor state until it becomes like unto itself, and this is called 'Assimilation' (Hadima). The fourth is that which rejects what is not appropriate, and is colled 'Exerction' (Dafi'a). And of the three faculties, one is that which increaseth it by diffusing throughout it untritious matters with a suitable and equal diffusion. The second is that which accompanies this nutriment until it reaches the extremities. is that which, when the organism has attained perfection and begins to tend towards defect, oppours and produces germs, in order that, if destruction overtake the parent in this world, these may become its substitute and ropreseatative, so that the order of the world may be guarded from detriment, and the species may not cease. called the 'Reproductive Faculty' (Quivwat-i-Munallida).

¹ The author alludes either to petrifaction and the formation of stalactites, or to ice.

A., B., وقسط on [all] parts." In has وقسط which seems to me

³ A., B., L. add essertain the meaning.

So this kingdom rose superior to the mineral and vogetable kingdoms in these several ways which have been mentioned; and the far-reaching Wisdom of the Creator so ordained, that those kingdoms should be connected successively and continuously, so that in the mineral kingdom the first thing which attained completeness and underwont the process of evolution became higher in organization until it grew to coral (marjan, i.e. bussad), which is the ultimate term of the minerel world,1 until it was connected with the first stage of plant life. And the first thing in the vegetable kingdom is the thorn, and the last the date-palm, which has been assimilated to the animal kingdom, eince it needs the mule to fertilize it so that it may bear fruit; 2 while another [member of this kingdom] flees from its foo, for the vine flees from the 'ashuga," a plant which, when it twists round the vine, causes it to shrivel up. vegetable kingdom, therefore, there is nothing higher than the date-palm and the vine, inasmuch as they are connected with the superior kingdom, and have outstepped the limits of their own world, and have evolved themselves in a higher direction.

N. 1

Excursus III.

Now whon this kingdom had attained perfection, and the influence of the 'Fathers' of the upper world bad worked on the 'Mothers' below, and these had assumed a finer temper, and the interspace hotween the air and the fire became involved, and a finer offspring resulted, the manifeetation of the animal world took place. This took to itself the faculties poesessed by the vegotable kingdom, and added thereunto two othere, one the faculty of discovery, which is called the 'Perceptive Feculty' (Mudrika), whereby the animal discerns things; the second the power of voluntary movement, by the help of which the animal moves automatically, approaching that which is agreeable to it and retreating from that which is offensive to it; and this is called the 'Motor Faculty' (Maharrika).

Now the Percepture Faculty is subdivided into ten branches, five of which are called the External Senses and five the Internal Senses. The former are Touch, Taste, Hearing, Sight,

¹ The Pearl, however, seems generally to be placed higher. See Disterier's

Mikrokesmes, p. 11.

² See Dieterici's Mikrokesmes, p. 25.

⁴ A species of Doluches, See Lane's Arabic Levicon, s.v.

⁵ By the 'Seven Fathers above' and the 'Four Mothers below' the seven planete and the four elements are intended.

and Sniell. Now Touch is a souse distributed throughout the flesh and skin of the animal, so that the nerves perceive and discern anything which touches it such as drynoss and moisture, heat and cold, roughness and smoothnoss, harsh-Taste is a sense located in that nerve ness and softaess. which is distributed over the eurface of the tongue, which apprehonds tastes and dissolved flavours from those bodies which come in contact with it; and it is this sense which discriminates between sweet and bittor, sharp and sour, and the like of these. Hearing is a sense located in the nervs which is distributed about the auditory meatus, so that it detects any sound which is discharged against it by undulations of the air compressed between two impinging hodies, that is to say, two bodies brought into contact with one another, by the impact of which the air is thrown into waves and becomes the cause of sound, inasmuch as it acts upon the air which is stationary in the auditory moatus, comes into contact with it, reaches this nervo, and gives rise to the sensution of hearing. Sight is a faculty located in two nerve-bulbs, which discorns images projected on tho orystalline hamour, whether of figures or solid bodies, variously coloured by the medium of a translucont substanco which subsists between it and the surfaces of reflecting bodies. Smell is a faculty located in a protuberance situated in the fore part of the brain and resembling the nipple of the female breast, which approhonde what the nir inhaled brings to it of odoure mineled with the vapours wafted by air-currents, or what is impressed upon it by diffusion from the ederifie body.

The Free Internal Senses.\textsupers.\textsupers\textsu

¹ See my Fear amongst the Perenaus, pp. 144, 146.

percoption being apprehended only when received by it. The second is the Imagination (Khayál), a faculty located ia the posterior vontriclos of the second convolution of the brain, which procorves what the Composite Sense has approhended from the external senses, so that this remains in it after the subsidence of the sease-impressions. is the 'Imaginative Faculty' (Mutakhayyila), thus called when animals are under discussion, but, in the case of the human soul, named the 'Cogitativo Faoulty' (Mutafakkira). This is a faculty located in the middle ventriole of the brain, whose function it is to co-ordinate with one another, and to preserve, those particular percepts which are etered in the Imagination, and to keep thom distinct from one enother by the central of thought. The fourth is the 'Apprehensive Faculty' (Wahima), which is a faculty located in the extromity of the middle ventricle of the brain. Its function is to discover the supre-sensual ideas existing in particular percepts. By it the kid distinguishes between its dam and n welf, and the child between a piece of rope and a scrpent. The fifth is the 'Retontive Faculty' (Hafidha), also called the 'Momory' (Dhukira), which is a faculty located in the posterior vontricle of the brain. It preserves those suprasonsual ideas discovered by the Apprehension; between which and itself the same relation subsists as between the Imagination and the Composite Sense, though the letter preserves forms and the former ideas.

Now ell these are the servants of the Animal Soul, a substance having its well-spring in the heart, which, when it acts in the heart, is called the Animal Spirit, but when in the brain, the Psychic Spirit, and when in the liver, the Natural Spirit. It is a subtle vapour which rises from the blood, diffuses itself to the remotest arteries, and resembles the sun in luminosity. Every animal which possesses these Perceptive and Motor faculties, and these ten subordinate faculties derived therefrom, is called a perfect animal; but if any faculty is lacking in it, defective. Thus the snake has no ears, the ant no eyes, and these two are called deafand bliad; but none is more defective than the megget, which is a red worm found in the mud of streams, called therefore gil-khuára ('mud-eater'), but in Transoxania Za'dk-kirma (?). This is the lowest animal, while the highest is the satyr (namás), a creature inhabiting the plains of Turkistán, of creet carriage, of vertical stature, with wide flat nails. It cherishes a great affection for men; wherever it sees them, it halts on their path and examines them atteatively; and when it finds a solitary man, it carries him off; may, it is even said that it will conceive from him. This, after mankind, is the highest of animals, inasmuch as in several respects it resembles man; first, in its erect stature; secondly, in the breadth of its nails and in the hair of its head.

Anecdole i.

I beard as follows from Abú Ridá b. 'Alslu's-Salám of Níshápúr, in the Great Mosque at Níshápúr, in the year a.h. 510 (=a.d. 1116-1117):—"We were travelling towards Tamgháj, and in our caravan were several thousand camels. One day, when we were marching in the midday heat, we saw on a hillock a woman, bare-headed, extremely beautiful in form, with a figure like a cypress, a face like the moon, and long hair, standing and looking at us. Although I spoke to her, she made no reply; and when I approached her, she fied, running so swiftly in her flight that no herse coald overtake her. Our guides, who were

. زعاک گربه .L , زعاک کرمه .B , رعاک کرمه که ۸. reads

¹ Cf. Dietarici's Mikrokosmos, p. 43.

The term needs either denotes a real animal or a fabulous monster. In the first sense it is used of various kinds of monkeys, e.g. the orang-outing and marmosot; in the latter it is equivalent to the Shiq or Half-man (which resembles a man out in two vertically) of the Arabs, and the Div-mardum of the Persians. See Qazwin's 'Aja'ibu'i-blakhluqdi, p. 449; and my Year amongst the Persians, pp. 165, 267.

See Qazwini's A'thdru'l-Bildd, p. 275.

The meaning of this word is conjectuml. The sentence runs in A:

. وکری کشان ما ترکان بودند.

B. has مرکزی کشان با ترکان بودند: معمد معمد کشان ما ترکان بودند.

Turks, said that this was a wild man, such as they call names."

Now you must know that it is nobler than other animals in those three respects which have been mentioned.

So when, by lapse of long ages and time, organization waxes more delicate, the moment comes for that interaction which takes place between the elements and the heavens, and man comes into being, bringing with him all that existed in the mineral, vegetable, end animal kingdoms, to which is added the capacity for intellectual concepts. So he becomes king over all, and brings all things under his control. For from the mineral world he made jewels, gold and silver his embellishment and adorament, while from iron, tin, copper, and lead he fashioned utensils for his uso. vegotable kingdom also he made his food and raineat and carpets; and from the animal world he provided himself with steeds and beasts of burden. Morcover, from all three kingdoms he chose out medicaments wherewith to heal Whenco did there accruo to him all superiority? By this, that he know himself, and, by menns of intellectual concepts, know God. "He who knoweth himself, knoweth his Lord."

So this kingdom [of man] became divided into three classes. The first is that class which is proximate to the Animal Kingdom, such as the wild men of the waste and the mountain, whose intelligence doth not more than suffice to secure their own livelihood, seek their own advantage, and ward off what is to their detriment. The second class comprise th the inhabitants of towns and cities, who possess civilization, mutually assist one another, and discover crafts and arts; but whose scientific attainments are limited to the organizing of such association as subsists between them, to the end that the different classes may continue to exist. The third class comprises such as are independent of these things, whose occupation, by night and by day, in secret and in public, is to reflect, "Who are we; for what reason did we come into existence, and who hath brought ue into being?" In other words they hold dehate concerning the real essences of things, reflect on their coming, and anxiously consider their departure, saying, "How have we come? Whither do we go?"

This class, again, is subdivided into two sorts; first, those who reach the essence of this abject by means of masters, hy laborious toil and absorption, and hy reading and writing; and such are called philosophers. But there is yet another sort who, without master or book, reach the extreme limit of this problem, and these are called prophets.

Now, the peculiar virtues of the Prophet are three: first, that, without instruction, he knows all knowledges; secondly, that he gives information concerning yesterday and to-morrow otherwise than hy analogical reasoning; and thirdly, that his soul hath such power that from whatever body he will he taketh the form and produceth another form, which thing none can do save such as are conformed to the Angelic World. Therefore in the Human World none is shove him, and his command is effective for the well-heing of the world; for whatever they have, he has, while possessing also an additional qualification which they have not, that is to say, communion with the Angelic World. This additional qualification is in brief termed the Prophetic Function, and is in detail such as we have explained.

Now, so long as such a man lives, he points out ta his people what things conduce to well-being in both worlds, by the Command of God, glorione is His Name, communicated to him by means of the Angels. But when, hy natural dissolution, he tarms his face towards the other world, he leaves behind him a Code derived from the indications of God Almighty and his own sayings. And assuredly he requires to so as his enhatitute, and to maintain his Law and Practice, a vicegereat, who must needs he the most excellent of mankind and the most porfect product of his age, in order that he may revive this Law and carry out this Practice; and such en one is called an Imam. This Imam can cope with the disasters of the East and the West, the North and the South, in such wise that the effects of his care extend alike to the most remote end the nearest, while his command and prohibition reach alike the intelligent and the ignerant. But he must needs have vicars to act for him in distant parts of the world, and not every one of these will have such power that all mankind shall be compelled to admit it. Hence there must be a leader, an administrator, a compeller, which administrator and compeller is called a Monarch, that is to say, a King; and his vicarious function Sovereignty. The King, therefore, is the lieutenant of the Imam, the Imam of the Prophet, and the Prophet of God (mighty and glarious is No!).

().

ja (i

Wall has it been said on this subject :

"Then know that the functions of Prophet and King Are set side by side like two stones in one ring."

Know, therefore, that the Regal and Prophetic offices are as two jewels in one sing, for the Prince of the sons of men himself bath said "State and Church are twins," siece in form and essence neither differe, either as regards increase or defect, from the other. So, by virtue of this decree, no hurden, after the Prophetic office, is weightier than Sovereignty, nor any function more laborious than that of governing. Hence a king needs round about him, as men on whose counsel, judgement, and deliberations depend the lossing and binding of the world, and the well-being and ill-being of the servants of God Almighty, such as are in every case the most excellent and most perfect of their time.

Now of the special ministers of Kings nrn the Secretary, the Poet, the Astrologor, and the Physician, and these can in nn wise be dispensed with. For the maintenance of the administration is hy the Secretary; the perpetuation of immortal renown by the Poet; the ordering of affairs by the Astrologer; and the health of the body by the Physician.

These four arduous functions and noble arts are amongst the hranches of the Science of Philosophy; the functions of the Soribe and the Poet being bronches of the Science of Logic; that of the Astrologer, one of the principal subdivisions of Mathematics; while the Physician's Art is amongst the branches of Natural Science. This hook, therefore, comprises Four Discourses, to wit:—

First Discourse, on the essence of the Secretarial Art, and the neture of the Secretary.

Second Discourse, on the essence of the Poetic Art, and what it believes the Poet to be.

Third Discourse, on the essence of the Science of Astrology, and the distinguishing signs of the Astrologor.

Fourth Discourse, on the essence of the Science of Medicino, and the function and neture of the Physician.

In all these divisions of Philosophy, then, that will be edvanced which is appropriate to this book; and thereafter ten pleasing anecdotes, of the choicest connected with that subject and the rarest germane to that topic, of what hath befalled persons of the class under discussion, will be added, in order that it may become plainly known to the King that the Secretariol Office is not a trivial matter; that the Poetic Calling is no mean occupation; that Astrology is a necessary Science; that Medicine is indispensable; and that the wise King cannot do without these four persons—the Soribe, the Poet, the Astrologer, and the Physician.

FIRST DISCOURSE.

On the Essence of the Secretarial Function and the Nature of the Perfect Scribe.

The Secretarial Function is an art comprising reasoned medos of address and communication, and teaching the forms of address employed amongst men in correspondence, consultation, contection, enlogy, condemnation, diplomocy, provocation, and conciliation, as well as in magnifying matters or minimizing them; contriving means of excuso or consure; imposing covenants; recording antocedents; and displaying, in every case, orderly arrangement, so that all may be onenciated primarily and finally.

Hence the Secretary must be of goutle birth, of refined honour, of penetrating discernment, of profound reflection, and of firm judgement; and the amplest portion and fullest charo of the methods and attainments of this art must be his. Neither must be be romote from, or unacquainted with, logical judgements; and he must know the ranks of his contemporaries, and he familiar with the dignitics of the leading men of his time. Moroover, he should not be absorbed in the wealth and perishable goods of this world; nor concern himself with the approval or condemnation of prejudiced persons and tattlers, or pay any heed to them; nud he should, when exercising his secretarial functions, guard the houser of his muster from degrading situations and dangerous practices. And in the course of his letter, while pursuing his duties of correspondence, he should not quarrol with eminent and powerful personages; and, even though anmity subsist between his muster and the person whom he is addressing, he should restrain his pen, and not attack him, save in the case of one who may have overstepped his own proper limit, or advanced his foot beyond the circle of respect, for they eay: "One for one,2 and he who begins is most in the wrong."

And in his forms of address he should observe moderation, writing to each person that which befits his position, whereunto his kingdom, domain, army, and treasure are a guide; save in the case of one who may himself have fallen short in this matter, or made display of undue pride, or neglected some point of courtosy, or manifested an arrogance which reason cannot regard otherwise than as misplaced in such ¹ i.e. "once and for all," with such clearness as to leave no ambiguity, or ground for future dispute.

[&]quot; i.o., "Tit for lat, and the aggressor is most to blame."

onrespondence, and unsuitable in epistolary communications. In such cases it is parmitted and ellowed to the Scribe to take up his pen, set his best foot forward, and in this pass go to the extreme limit and utness bound, for they say: "Haughtmess towards the haughty is a good work." But in no case must be suffer any dust from the atmosphere of conflict in this erema of correspondence to alight on the skirt of his master's honeur; and in the setting forth of his message he must adopt that method which the enators of the Arabs have thus described: "The best speech is that which is brief and significant, and not nearisome." For if the ideas accord not with the words, the discussion will be pretracted, and the Scribe will be stigmatized as prelix, and "He who is proba is a babbler."

New the words of the Scribe will not attain to this olevation until he becomes familiar with every science, obtains some hint from every master, bears some apherism from every philosopher, and borrows some elegance from every man of letters. Therefore he must necessom himself to peruse the Scripture of the Lord of Glery, the Traditions of Muhammsd the Chesen One (on whom, and on whose family, be God's blessing and poace), the Memoirs of the Companions, the proverbial sayings of the Arabs, and the wise words of the Persians; and to reed the books of the ancients, and to study the writings of their successors, such as the Correspondence of the Şáhib Isma'il ibn 'Abbád' and Şábi; the Qābūs-nāma's; the compositions of Ḥamādi, Laqāni, and Ibn Qudāma's; the Gests of Badi'u'z-Zamān التكبّر سع المنكبّر صدقة ' ' التكبّر مدقة ' ' مُخبّر الكلام ما فل و دلّ و لم يُمَلُّ ' ' . المكثار مهذارٌ ' ' .

⁴ See the Fatimetu'd-Dahr (ed. Damascus), vol. iii, pp. 31-112; De Slane's Ibn Kallıkdu, vol. i, pp. 212-217. L. omits "and Sabi,"

^a Composed by Kayka'ús b. Iskandai b. Qabús b Washingir in A. K. 475 (AD 1082-3) See Pertsch's Cat. of Boilin I'sisian MSS., pp. 302-3.

Soo Von Kremer's Culturgesch., I, pp. 269, 270.

al-Hamadání,¹ al-Harirí,¹ and nl-Hamidí¹; the Rescripts of al-Bal'amí,³ Ahmad-i-Hasan,⁴ and Abú Naṣr Kundurí¹; the Letters of Muhammad 'Abd, 'Ahdu'l-Humid, and the Sayyidn'r-Ru'asá; the Séances of Muhammad-i-Mansúr,⁶ Ihn 'Abbádí,² and Ibnn'n-Nassába, the descendant of 'Alí; and, of the poetical works of the Arabs, the Dimins of Mutanabhí,⁶ Ahíwardí,⁰ and Ghazzí ⁰; and, amougst the Persian poets, the poems of Hakím Rúdagí,¹¹ the Epic of Firdawsí,¹² and the panogyrics of 'Unṣurí¹³; since each one of these works which we have enumerated was, after its kind, the incomparable and unique product of its time; and every scribe who hath these books, and stimulates his mind, polishes his wit, and enkindles his foncy by their perusal, will over raise the level of his diction, whereby a scribe becomes famous.

Now if he be well acquainted with the Qur'an, with one verse therefrom he may discharge his obligation to a whole realm, as did Iskafi. 14

See Von Kromer's Cutturgesch., ii, pp. 470-476; Brockelmann's Gesch. d. Arab. Litt., pp. 93-94 and 276-278.

See Riou's Persian Catalogue, vol. ii, pp. 747-8, where a very flue old MS. of the Magdadt-i-Hamidi, written in the thirteenth century of our era, is described.

3 Abo 'Ali Muhammad al-Bal'ami (d. a.u. 388).

4 The Ghaznavid Minister, Ahmad b. Hasan of Maymand (d. A.M. 424), is probably mount.

5 See De Slaue's Ibn Khallikda, vol. iil, pp. 290-295.

- 1 Probably Muhammad b. Mansar al-Hadded. See II Xh., No. 1,720.
- ² Aba 'Aşim Muhammad b. Ahmed al-'Abbadi (see Riou's Araba Suppl., p. 755), who died a.n. 458, is probably intended.
- * See Von Kromer's Culturgesch., ii, pp. 380, 381; Brockelmann's Arab. Litt., pp. 86-89.
- See Brockelmann's Arab. Litt., p. 253; and the Yatima, vol. iv, pp. 25 and 62-64, where montion is made of two Abiwardie.
 - . عبزٌ ي Brockelmann, op. cit., p. 253. A., however, rends
- ¹¹ See Ethé's monograph, and also his article on Rúdagí in the Encyclopaedia Britannica.
- See especially Noeldeke's D. Iranische Nationalepos in vol. ii (pp. 130~211) of Geiger and Kubn's Grundriss d. Iranischen Philologie.
 - 13 See Ethő in the same Grundeiss, pp. 224, 225.
- ¹¹ Abu'l-Qasim 'Alt b. Muhammad al-Iskhii. See Fatima, vol. iv, pp. 29-33; iii, 4.

Angedota ii.

Iskáfí was one of the secretaries of the House of Samán, and knew his oraft right well, so that he could cumningly traverse all obstacles, and emergo triumphant from the most difficult posses. He discharged the duties of secretary in the Chancellery of Núh b. Mansúr, but they did not properly recognize his worth, or bestow on him favours adequate to his pre-eminence. He therefore fled from Bukhárá to Alptagín at Herát. Alptagín, a Turk, wise and discerning, made much of him, and confided to him the Chancellery, so that at length he became one of his ministers. Now because there had sprung up at the court a new nebility who mode light of the old nobles, while Alptagin patiently bore their presumption, matters at last culminated in rebellion, hy reason of some slight put upon Then Amír Núh, incited by n party of the now noblos, wrote from Bukhárá to Zábulistán that Snbukingín should come with that army, and the sons of Simjur 2 with their army from Nishapur, and should make war on Alptagin. And this wor is very celebrated, and the event most notorious.

So when these ormies reoched Herát, the Amír 'Alí b. Muhtáj scat Kisá'í, who was the Chief Chamberlain (Sahiba'l-Bab), to Alptagin, with a letter like fire and water blended together, contoining threats and menoces which left no room for peace and no way for conciliation, such as on angry master might write in his absence to his disobedient

¹ This seems to be an error (though it stands thus in all three copies) for Mansar b. Nah (Mansar I), who reigned A.M. 360-366; for Nah b. Mansar (Nah II) reigned A.M. 366-387, and Alphagin died in A.M. 362 or 364. Concerning the Diwdnu'r-Raso'il, see Ven Krenne's Cultungeschicht. d. Arab., i. pp. 174, 200; and A. do B. Kazimirski's Menoutebehrs, pp. 36 and 43. According to Ibnu'l-Athir (Bulaq ed. of A.M. 1303, vol. viii, p. 179), Alphagin's nevolt took place in A.M. 3-1.

* Noo Defremery's Hist, des Camanides, pp. 260, 261.

3 Concerning this general, see Defremery's Hist, des Samanides, p. 243.

A. has الكشاي both here and in 1. 4 of the next page, and in the second place adds 'Ali b. Muhtej after Abu'l-Hasan.

sarvaats, the whole latter filled with such expressions of "I will come," "I will take," "I will bind," "I will strike," "I will slay." When the Chamberlain Abu'l-Hasan Kish's submitted this letter and delivered the message, not withhelding aught, Alptagin, who was already vexed, grow more vexed, and broke out in auger, saying: "I was his father's servant, but when my master passed from this trousitory to that eternal ebode, he cutrusted him to me, not me to him. Although, to outward seeing, I should obey him, it is in fact quite etherwise, for when you examine this matter, a contrary conclusion results, seeing that I am in the last stages of old age, and he in the first stages of youth. Those who have impelled him to act thus are destroyers of this Dynasty, not counsellers, and are everthrowers of this house, not supporters."

Then he asked of Iskáfí, "How wilt thou answer this letter?" Iskáfí, on the spur of the moment, wrote the first draft of the answer as follows:—

"In the Name of God, the Merciful, the Clement. O Núli, thou hast contended with us and made great the contention with us. Produce, then, that wherewith thou threatenest us, if thou art of those who speak truly."

When this letter reached Núh h. Mansúr, the Amír of Khurásán, he read it, and was astonished; and all the gentlemen of the court were filled with amazo, and the scribes bit their fingers in wonder. And when the affair of Alptagín was disposed of, Iskáfi fled away privily, for he was fearful and terrified; until suddenly Núh sent a messenger to him to summen him to his presence, and conferred on him the post of Secretary. So his affairs prospered, and he became conspicuous and famous amongst the votaries of the Pen. Had he not known the Qur'an, he would not thus have distinguished himself on this occasion, nor would his position have risen from the station he occupied to this high degree.

¹ Qur'an, xi, 34.

Anecdole iii.

When Iskafi's affairs woxed thus prosperous, and he became established in the service of Núh b. Munsúr, Mákán the son of Kákí 1 rebelled at Ray and in Kühistan, withdraw his neck from the yoke of obedience, sent his ogents to Khwar, Samman and Simnak, captured several of the towns of Kúmish,2 sud paid no heed to the Sámánids. Núli b. Mansur was afraid, because this was o formidable and able man, and set himself to deal with this matter. He therefore ordered Tash, the commander-in-chief, to morely against him with seven thousand horssmen, suppress this acdition, and put an end to this grave incident in whetever wey he deemed most expedient.

Now Tash was very wise and clear in judgement, emerging ewiftly and skilfully from the straitest passes; und he was also victorious in warfare, and had never turaed book in defeat from any one of the countless battles he had wared. nor come forth wersted from any campaign. While he lived, the dominion and outhority of the House of Saman enjoyed the greatest brilliancy and prosperity.

On this occasion, then, the Amír, being much preoccupied and distressed, sent a messenger to summon Iskafi, and held a private interview with him. "I am greatly troubled," said hs, "by this occurrence; for Makan is a brave man, and an able, and bath, in addition to his bravery and courage, administrative capacity and generosity, eo that there have been few like him amongst the Daylamis. You must co-operate with Tash, and whatever he laoks for the raising of an army at this juncture, you must eupply.

The chrocological difficulties involved in these two stories are considerable, for the abellion of Makan b. Kaki occurred in A.H. 329, towards the end of the reign of Nagr II b. Ahmed, i.e. long before the abellion of Alphagin (see n. I on p. 638, sepan). See Defrémery's banamides, pp. 248 and 263-4.

Better known as Quais, the Arabiered form of the name. See B. de Maynard's Diet. Geogr., Histor., et Litt. de la Price, pp. 464-5. For the three other towns mentioned, see the same work, pp. 213, 317, and 318.

And I will establish myself at Nishapur, so that the army may be supported from the base, and the focusan discouraged. Every day a swift messenger must come from you to me with disputches, wherein you must set forth the pith of what may have happened, so that my anxieties may be assuaged." Iskafi bowed and said, "I will obey."

So next day Tash unfurled his standard, sounded his drums, and set out for the front from Bukhara, crossing the Oxus with seven thousand horsemen; while the Amir followed him with the remainder of the army to Nishapur. There he invested Tash and the same with robes of honour; and Tash, raising his standard, marched into Buyhaq, whence he marched forwards into Kumish to confront the enemy, with fixed purpose and in the best of spirits.

Meanwhile Makan, with ten thousand mailed men, was encamped at the gates of Ray, where he had taken ap his position. Tash arrived, passed by the city, and encamped over against him. Then messengers passed to and fro hetween them, but no settlement was effected, for Makan was puffed up with pride on account of that fermidable army which he had gathered together from every quarter. It was therefore decided that they should join battle.

Now Tash was an aged warrior, who for forty years had held the position of commandor-in-chief, and had witnessed many such engagements; and he so manouvred that when the two armies met, and the doughty warriers and champions of Transoxania and Khurasan moved forward from the centre, only half of Makan's army was engaged, while the rest were not fighting. Makan was slain, and Tash, whou he had ceased from taking and binding and slaying, turned to Iskafi and said, "A carrier-pigeon must be sent in advance, to be followed later by a courier: but all the main festures of the battle must be summed up in one scatence, which shall indicate all the circumstances, yet shall not exceed what a pigeon can earry, and shall indequately express our meaning."

Thea Iskáfí took so much paper as two fingers would cover and wrote:—"In the Name of God, the Merciful, the Clement. As for Makan, he hath become as his name" I [Makan = "He hath not been" in Arabic]. By this "ma" he intended the negative, and by "kan," the verb substantive, so that the Persian of it would be, "Makan hath become like his name," that is to say, hath become nothing.

When the carrier-pigeen reached the Amír Núh, he was not more delighted at the victory than at this dispatch, end he ordered Iskáfí's salary to be increased, saying: "Such a person must maintain a heart free from cure in order to attain to such delicacies of expression." *

Anecdote iv.

One who pursues any craft which depends on reflection eught to be free from care and anxiety, for if it be otherwise, the arrows of his thought will fly wide and will not hit the target of achievement, since only by a tranquil mind can one arrive at such words.

It is related that a certain Secretary of the 'Abbasid Caliphs was writing a letter to the governor of Egypt; and, his mind being tranquil and himself submerged in the ocean of reflection, was forming sentences precious as pearls of great price and fluent as running water. Suddenly his maidservant entered, saying, "There is no flour loft." The scribe was so put out and disturbed in mind that he lest the thread of his diction, and was so affected that he wrote in the letter "There is no flour left." When he had finished it, he sent it to the Calipb, having no knowledge of these words which he had written.

When the lotter reached the Caliph, and he read it, and saw this sentence, he was greatly astonished, being unable to account for so strange an occurrence. So he sent a messenger to summon the scribe, and enquired of him concerning this. The seribo was covered with shame, and gave the true explanation of the matter. The Culiph was mightily astonished and said: "The beginning of this letter excels the latter part by as much as the sure 'Say, He is God, the One' oxcels the sura 'The hands of Abu Lahab shall perish,' and it is a pity to surrender the minds of cloquent men like you into the hands of the struggle for the necessaries of life." Then he ordered him to be given means sufficiently ample to prevent such an announcement as this from ever entering his ears again. Naturally it then happened that he could compress into two sentences the ideas of two worlds.

[.] امتا ماكان فصار كاسمه ¹

² The substance of the anecdote is given in the Tili ikh-i-Guzida, and is cited by Dehómery at pp. 247-S of his Histoire des Samandes (l'aus, 1845).

Anecdote v.

The Sahib Isma'il ibn 'Abbad,' entitled al-Kafi ("the Compotent"), of Ray,' was minister to the Shahanshah. He was most perfect in his accomplishments, of which fact his correspondence and his poetry are two sufficient witnesses and unimpeachable arbiters.

Now the Sahib was a man of just dealings, and such are went to be extremely pious and scrupulous in their religious duties, not bolding it right that a true believer should abide eternally in hell by reason of a grain of [rightcous] counity; and his servents and retainers and agents for the most part followed his example.

Now there was at Qum a judge appointed by the Sahib in whose godliness and piety he had the firmest belief, though there were some who asserted the controry, and brought information against him, which, however, left the Sahib unconvinced, until certain trustworthy persons of Qum, whose statements commanded credence, declared that in a certain suit between So-and-so and Such-an-one this judge had accepted a bribe of five hundred timáns. This was mightily displeasing to the Sahib for two reasons, first on account of the greatness of the bribe, and secondly on account of the shamoless unscrupulousness of the judge. He at once took up his pen and wrote:—

Que'an, exii.

² Qur'an, exi.
³ For an account of this great minister and generous patron of literature, see De Slane's translation of 1th Khallikin, rol. i, pp. 212-217, and n. 4 on p. 636, supra.

"In the Name of God, the Merciful, the Clement. O Judge of Qum! We dismiss you, so Come!"

Scholars and rhotoricians will notice and approxiate the high merit of this sentence in respect of its brovity, concision, and clearness, and naturally from that time forth rhotoricians and stylists have inscribed this epigram on their hearts, and repeat it to the people of the world.

Anecdote vi.

Lamghán 2 is a city in the district of Sind, one of the dependencies of Ghazna; and at this present time naught but one range of mountaies separates its inhabitants from the heathen, so that they live in constant dread of the attacks and raids of the unbelievers. Yet the mon of Lamghán are of good courage, sharp and fragal, and combining with their sharpness no small rascality, to such a degree that they think nothing of lodging a complaint against a tax-gatherer on account of a maund of chaff or a single egg; while for even less that they were ready to some to Ghazna to complain of exactions, and would remain there one or two months, and then return without having accomplished their object. In short, they are wondarful hands at patience, and are most stiffeecked in importunity.

. 1

المعالقة الرّحمن الرحيم 'ايّها القاضى بقمُ فد عزليات فعُم ' أيّها القاضى بقمُ فد عزليات فعُم ' الله المعاون المحمد الرحيم ' اليّها القاضى بقمُ فد عزليات فعُم ' المعاون المعا

Now in the reign of Sulfan Mahmud Yaminu'd-Dawla, the heathen one night attacked them, and damage of every sort bofol them. But these were mon who could raise a harvest without soil; and when this event happened several of their chiefs and mon of note rose up and came to Ghazna, and, with their garments rent, their heads nucovored, and uttering loud lamentations, entured the hazaar of Ghazna, went to the King's Palaco wailing and grieving, and so described their misfortune that even a stone would have been moved to tears. As their resentity, impudence, dissimulation, and eunning had not yet become apparent, that great minister, Ahmad Hasan of Maymand, 1 took pity upon them, and forgave them that year's taxes, exempting them from all exactions, and bidding them return home, strive more strenuously, and spend less, so that by the beginning of the next year thuy might recover their former position.

So the deputation of Langhau's returned with great contentment and huge satisfaction, and continued during that year in the easiest of circumstances, divulging their secret to no one. When the year came to an end, the same deputation returned to present another petition to the minister, simply setting forth that in the past year their lord the great minister had brightened their country by his grace and elemency and had effectively extended to them his protection, so that they were now able to dwell in peace on that border; but that, since their prosperity was still somewhat shaken, they feared that, should be demand the contribution on their possessions that year, some of them would be utterly ruined, and that, as a consequence of this, loss might accrue to the royal coffers.

The minister, therefore, extending his favour, excussed them the taxes of yet onether year. During these two years the people of Lamghan grow rich, but this did not suffice them, for in the third year their greed reasserted itself, and, hoping again to be excused, the same deputation again appeared at Court end made a similar representation. Then it become apparent to all the world that the people of Langhan were in the wrong. So the minister turned the petition over and wrote on the back of it: "Alkharája khurájan, adá'uhu dauá'uhu," that is to say, "The tax is a running sore: its cure is its discharge." And from the time of this great statesman this saying has become proverbial, and has proved useful in many cases. Muy the earth rest lightly on this great man!

¹ See n. 4 on p. 25, supra.

² This I take to be the meaning of على ندادند.

Anecdote vii.

There were great statesmon under the 'Abbasid dynasty, and indeed the lastary of the Barmeeides is well known and funous, and to what extent were their gifts and rewards, [Ibn] Sahl, called Dhu'r-Riyasatayn1 ("the lord of two commands"), and his brother Fadl were exelted above the very heavens, so much so that Ma'mun espoused Fadl's doughter and asked her in marriagn. Now she was a damsel peerless in beauty and unrivalled in attainments; and it was ngreed that Ma'mun should go to the bride's house and remain there for a month, and after the lapse of this period return home with the bride. On the day fixed for their departure he desired, as is customary, to array himself in better clothes. Now Ma'mun always were black; and people supposed that he wore it because black was the distinctive colour of the 'Abhasids: till one day Yahva b. Aktham 2 inquired of him, "Why is it that the Prince of Believers prefers black garments?" Ma'mun roplied to the Judge: "Black garments are for man and for the living; for no woman is married in black, nor is any dead man buried in black." Yahya was greatly surprised by this answer. So on this day Ma'min desired to inspect the wardrobe; but of a thousand coats of satin, of royal fabric, of fur, hund-woven, of various colours, hand-cut, of fine black silk,1 he neither approved nor accepted one, but elad bimsolf in his customary black, and mounted, and turned his face towards the bridg's house. Now on that day Full had decked out his palaco in such wise that the nobles were filled with wonder thereat, for he had collected so many rare things that words would fail to describe or enumerate them. So when Ma'mun reached the gute of this palace, he saw a cartain euspouded, fairer than a Chinese epring, and more delightful than the assurance of faith, whoreof the design charmed the heart and the colour mingled with the soul; and he said to himself: "Whichever of those thousand costs I had chosen, I should have been Praise be to God and thanks that I was aliamed hero. content with this black ruiment."

¹ There appears to be a confusion here between the two brothers. Hesen ibn Sahl was the father of Painn, al-Ma'mon's bride, while Fadl bere the title of Dhu'r-Reydastayn. See De Shue's Ibn Khallelda, vol. i, pp. 208-272 and 408-109; vol. ii, pp. 472-176. Also the Laqu'in'l-Ma'ary' of ath-Tha'alibi (ed. De Jeug), pp. 73. 74, where a full account is given of this marriage.

See De Slaue's Ibn Khallelda, 17, pp. 33-31.

Now of all the elaborate preparations made by Fadl on that day, one was this, that when Ma'man reached the middle of the palace yard, he saw a tray filled with wax, round which was arranged a pattern of pearls.² And at the feet of each guest were east several nuts, in each of which was a piece of paper whereon was inscribed the name of a village; and whoever drew one, to him were delivered the title-deeds of that village.

So when Ma'mun entered the bride's house, he saw a mansion faced with gypsum and adorned with paintings,3

The exact nature of most of these fabrics I have been unable to ascertain.

The list runs as follows: ونسيج و الكمرون عمارة و معارضي و اكسون الكسون الكسون طبقی [دید A., B. on.] پر : This sentence is not quito clear. To rune پر : This sentence is not quito clear. کرده (بعد کرد، هریکی چند [جید گرد کرد، هریکی چند [جید میلی میلی او ریخت (ریختند میلی).

A., B have شقّت ، سخت . L. rends : مختص ، strewn with perfumes of Chiaa, fairer than the East at the time of sunriso, and sweeter than a garden in the season of the rose. Ho saw, mereover, cast down and spread out at the entrance of the house, mats of cloth of gold,1 embroidered with rubies, pourls, and turqueises; and in like manner six cushions placed thereon, en which was seated a bounteous damsel sweeter than existence and life, and pleasanter than health und youth; in staturo such that the nehle cypress would have subscribed itself her scryaat; with checks which the brightest sun would have acknowledged as suzemin; with huir which was the envy of musk and ambergris; and with eyes after the likeness of the enyx and the narcissus. Sho, rising to her feet, advanced towards Ma'mun, with a profound obsisance and earnest spologies, brought him forward and scated him in the chief sent, and stood before him in service. Ma'mún bade her bs seated, whereupon she seated herself on hor knees,3 hanging her head and looking down at the carpet. Thereupon Ma'mun was evercome with leve: he had already lost his heart, and now he would have added thereunte his very soul. He stretched out his hand and drew forth from the pocket of his cont eighteen pearls, each one as large as a sparrow's egg, hrighter thun the sters of heuven, more lustrous than the teeth of the fair, rounder, nay, mere luminous, thua Jupiter or Saturn. These rolled on the surface of the carpet, and, hy reason of its smoothness and their renadaess, continued in motion, there being no cause for their quiesceoce. But the girl paid no heed to the pearls, nor so much as raised her head. Thereat was Ma'mun's passion further increased; and he extended

¹ This sentence, again, is not clear. It runs:
. . و خانه واری حصیر از شوشه و زر کشیدد افگنده .

2 A., B: (و چشمی : L. has: و چشم او از جسم جزع و عبهر بود) . چرن چشم حذع و عبهر و

³ i.o., in the Persian fashion, on the heels, with the knees together in front.

his hand to caress her, and would have opened the door of amorous dalliance. But this caress aransed her madesty and covared her with canfusion, and the delicate damsel was so affeated that sha was overtakan by that state peculiar to women, and the marks of shame and abashed modesty appeared in her altocks and cauntenance, and she suddenly exclaimed: "O Prince of Believers ! The command of God cometh, seck not then to husten it !"1

Thereat Ma'mun withdrew his hand, and was near swooning as account of the extreme beauty of this citation. and her graceful application of it. Yet still be could not take his oyes off bar, and for eighteen days he came not forth from this hause and concerned himself with naught savo twa occupations. And the affairs of Fadl prospored, and he attained to that high position to which he attained.

Ancedole viii.

Again ia the time of the 'Abbasid Caliphs, in the reign af al-Mustarshid bi'lláh a (may Gad make his tamb fragrant and exalt his rank in Paradisal), the sou of ul-Mustadihir bi'llah, the Prince of Believors cama farth from the city of Baghdad with a well-equipped army in full panoply, and much treasure, and many muniments of war, murching against Khurásáa, on account af a reparation which he would axact from the King af tha World Sanjar.3

Naw this quarrel had been contrived by interested persons, and was dua to the muchinations und representations of conspirators, who had brought matters to this pass. When the Caliph reached Kirmánsháh, he there delivered on a' Friday a hotally which in claquence transcended the highest zeaith of the sun, and reached the support and Qur'an, xvl, I. Cf. Do Slane's Ibn Khallikas, vol. 1, p. 270.

 The twenty-ninth 'Abbasid Caliph, reigned A v. 512-529.
 This happened in A.H. 529. See Houtsma's Recuest de Textes relatife de l'Histoire des Seldjouesdes, vol. ii (1889), pp. 171-178.

crawn of the guard-stars.\footnote{1} In the caursa of this harangue, after expressing his distress and despair, he complained of the House of Scljiq, in such wise that the orators of Arabia and the restoricians of Persia have confessed that, after the companions of the Prophet (God's blessing and peace rest on him, and his family), who were the disciples of the Focus of the Prophetic Function and the expounders of his pithy aphorisms, we one had composed a discourse so weighty and elequent. Said al-Mustarshid: "We entrusted our affairs to the House of Sciffq, but they contended against us, and the time lengthened over them, and their hearts were hardened, and many of them sinned," that is to say, withdrow their necks from our commands in the Religion of Islâm.

Anecdote ix.

The Gur Khan of Khita fought a battle with the King of the World Sanjar, the sau of Malikshah, at the gates of Samnrand, and so fateful was the day to the army of Islam that Transexania passed into his power. After putting to death the Imam of the East Husamu'd-Din (may God make bright his example, and extend ever him His Peacel), the Gur Khan bestewad Bukhara en Alptugin. Whea the Gur Khan turned bank, he entrusted the son of the Amir Bayanani, the nephew of Atsiz Khwarazanshah, ¹ Fargadayn, two bright stars near the Pole-star, β and γ of Uran Minor. See vol. ii of my Traveller's Natrative, p. 125, n. 2.

فَوُضنا أُمؤرُنا الى آل سلجوقُ نبرزُوا علمنا نطال عليهم الامد " فَمُسَتَّ قلوبهم و كثبرُ منهم فاسقون '

³ Sea Mirkhwand's History of the Schiqe, ed. Vullers, pp. 176-180. Professor Ross has pointed out to me that Gu Khan is a generic title. See History of the Moghuls of Central Asia, by Elias and Ross, p. 287 et seqq. See also Schefer's Christomathus Persans, vol. i, p. 34 et seqq.

So L., agreeing with Schefer, op. cit., p. 29, where A.H. 636 is given as the date of this event. For Alphagin A. and B. read مراجعة المستخطئة throughout.

L. has مامانی, A. سامانی (uncertain), B. بیابانی, but I cannot identity the name.

to the Imam Alimad b. 'Abdu'l-'Aziz, who was the Imam of Bukhárá, and the leuding man of his time,' so that whatever he did he might do by his advice, and that he should not take any step without his instructions. Then the Gur Khán turned back and retired to Bars-ján.²

Now his justice had no bounds, nor was there any limit to the effectiveness of his commands, and, indeed, in these two things lies the essence of kingship. But when Alptagin saw a clear field, he turned his hand to oppression, and began to levy contributions on Bakhara. So several of the people of Bukhara went as an embassy to the Gür Khan to seek redress. The Gür Khan, after the way of good Muslims, wrote a letter in Persian to Alptagiu as follows:—

"In the Name of God, the Merciful, the Clement. Let Alptagin know that, although wide distance separates us, our approval and displeasure are near at hand. Let Alptagin do that which Ahmad commands, and Ahmad that which Muhammad commands. Furewell."

Again and ugain we have considered this and reflected on it. A thousand volumes or even more might be written to enlarge on this letter, yet its purport is extremely plain and clear, needing no explanation. Seldom have I seen anything like it.

Anecdote x.

The extreme eloquence of the Qur'an is in its concision of words and murvellous presentation of ideas; imitation thereof results but in citation, to such a degree that a sense

Por و پېشرو زمان A. and B. have و پېشرو زمان, "and the son of Burban."

² Name uncertain. L. has Zanjan, which is quite unsuitable; A., بر سیجان. (and clearly legible); B., بر سیجان.

[.] B., نسوی برسیجان (La'a reading) مزد گورخان A. Ina, instead of سری ایرمایت B., of awe is produced, and the wise and understunding man is converted from his state [of doubt]. And this is a clear proof and trouchant argument to establish the fact that this Word did not proceed from the mouth of any created being, nor issue from any human lips or tongue, but that the stamp of Eternity is the stigma of its prescriptions and secutences.

It is related that one day one of the Muslims was reciting before Wulid b Mughiru this versu:—"And it was said, "O Earth, galp down thy unders, and O Heaven, draw them up': and the water abated. Thus was the matter effected. And it [i.e. the Ark] rested upon Mount Judt."! "By God," said Walid b. Mughira, "verily it hath beauty and sweetness, and verily at its highest it is terrible as a wild beast in fury, and at its lowest is as the deepest mine!" When even enomies reached such a level of enthusiasm, by reason of the oloquence of the Qur'an and its incomparable height in the domain of religion and equity, to what degree must friends uttain?

Ancedote xi.

In former times it was enstowary with the kings and tyrants of the world, such as the Píshdádi, Kayání, and Sásánisa monarchs and the Caliphs, to vaunt themselves and compete with one mother in justice and accomplishments, and with every ambassador whom they despatched they used to send wise sayings, riddles, and enigmatical questions. So the king, under these circumstances, stood in need of persons of intelligence and discrimination, and men of jadgement and statesmanship; and several councils would be held and adjourned, until they were unanimous as to their answers, and when the inner menuings of these problems and onigmus were plain and apparent, then they would despatch the ambassadur.

¹ Qui'an, xi, 46.

This practice was maintained until the time of Mahmud b. Sabaktagin Yaminu'd-Dawla (may God have mercy upon him!). One day he despatched an ambassador to Bughrá Kbaa in Transoxania, and in the letter which had been drafted occurred this passage: - " God Almighty south, Verily the most honourable of you in God's night is he who is most pious of you.'1 The neute and oritical are agreed that here he [i.e. the Prophet] guards himself from ignorance; for the soule of men are subject to no more griovous defect than this, nor is there aught lower than the fault of folly. To the truth of this proposition and the soundness of this assertion God's Word also bears witness: '[God will raise up those of you who believe] and those to whom knowledge buth been given to [superior] degrees." 2 Therefore we desire that the Imains of the luad of Transoxagia and the doctore of the East and scholare of the Kháqán's Court chould give so much information touching eesentiale as to etate what the Prophetic Office is, what Saintship, what Roligion, what Islam, what Faith, what Woll-doing, what Godliness, what the Approbation of Right, what the Prohibition of Wrong, what the Path, what the Balance, what Justice, and what Pity."

When this letter reached the Court of Bughra Khan,3 and he had acquainted himself with its purport and contents, he summened the Imams of Transoxania from the different towns and districts, informed them of the matter, and requested them to answer these words, bidding each one compose a treatise on this subject, and introduce in the course of their dissertation and argument a reply to these interrogatione. They oraved a delay of four months; which period dragged on with all sorts of detrimonts, the least of which was the disbursoments from the treasury for the ealaries of the nubassadors and the maintenance of the Imams, until at longth Muhammad b. 'Abdu'llah the scribe, who was Baghrá Kbin's private secretary, and was deeply vorsed in learning and highly distinguished in scholarship, besides being one of the most elequent stylists amongst the Muslims both in proso and verse, said: "I will answer these questions in two words, in such wise that when the greatest scholers and most conspicuous men of al-Islam shall see my answor, it shall command their approval and admiration." So he took up his pen and wrote under the questions, after the fashion of a logal docision (fatica): "South God's Apostle (upon schom be the Blessing of God, and also on his Family), 'Reverence for God's command and loving-kindness towards God's people." All the Imams of Transoxunia bit their fingers in amazomout and expressed their admiration, saying, "Hore indeed is an answer which is perfect, and un utterance which is comprehensive l" And the Khagan was mightily pleased because the difficulty had been overcome by a scribe and not left to the divines. And when the answer reached Ghuzna, all applieded it.

¹ Qur'an, xlix, 13.

² Qur'an, lviii, 12.

³ Here A. has غراخان and B قراخان, though they agree with L. above and below.

It therefore results from those premises that an intelligent and accomplished Secretary is a great ernament to the brilliancy of a King's Court. And with this anecdote we conclude this chapter. And from God cometh assistance.

SECOND DISCOURSE.

On the Nature of Poetry, and the Utility of the Skilful Poet.

Poetry is that art whereby the poet arranges imaginary propositions, and adapts the deductions, with the result that he can make a little thing appear great and a great thing small, or cause good to appear in the garb of cvil and evil in the garb of good. By acting on the imagination, he excites the faculties of anger and concupiedence in such a way that by his suggestion mon'e temperaments become affected with exultation or depression; whereby he conduced to the accomplishment of great things in the order of the world.

Ancedole xii.

Thus they relate that Ahmad b. 'Abdu'lláh al-Khujistání i was asked, "Now didst thou, who wert originally an ass-herd, become Amír of Khurásán?" He replied: "One day I was reading the Díván of Handhala of Bádghis, in Bádghie of Khujistán, when I chanced on these two couplets:—

'If lordship lies within the lion's jaws, Go, risk it, and from those dread portals seize Such straight-confronting death as men desire, Or riches, greatness, rank and lasting case.'

An impulse stirred within me such that I could in no wise remain content with that condition wherein I was. I therefore sold my asses, bought a horse, and, quitting my country, entered the service of 'Amr b. Layth.' At that time the fortune of the Suffárís still floated at the zonith of its prosperity. Of the three brothers, 'Alí was the youngest, and Yu'qúb and 'Amr had precedence over him.

^{1&}quot; Khujistan.—In the mountains near Heat. From this country issued Ahmad h. 'Abdu'llúli al-Khujistani, who revolted at Nishapar and died in A.M. 264." (Barbier do Meynard's Diet, Géogr., Histor., et Latt. de la Perse, p. 197.) The learned editor points out, however, that, according to Ibnu'l-Athir, Ahmad was assessianted in the mouth of Sauwwil, A.M. 265, after having reigned at Nishapar for six years. See the Journal Asiatique for 1845, p. 346 et seqq. of the second half.

See Ethé's Rûdagi's Vorläufer and Zeitgenessen, pp. 38-10, where these verses, and others by the same poet, are cited.

⁴ Brother of Ya'qub b. Layth, the sounder of the short-lived Saffari dynasty.

'Ame reigned from A.R. 265 to A.R. 287.

When Ya'qub came from Khurasan to Ghazna over the mountains, 'Ali b. Layth sent me back from Ribit-i-Sangin ("the Stone Rest-house") to act as his agont to his feudal estates in Khurasan. I had collected an army of a hundred on the road, and had with mo besides some twenty horsemen of my own. Now of the estates held in fiel by 'Ali b. Layth one was Karákh! of Herát, a second Khán-i-Níshápúr. When I reached Karúkh, I produced my warrant, and what was paid to me I divided amongst the army and gave to the soldiers. My horsemen new numbered three hundred. Whon I reached Khwaf,2 and again produced my warrant, the burghers of Khwaf contested it, saying, 'Do we want a magistrate with [a bodyguard of only] ten men?'s I thereupon decided to renounce my allegiance to the Saffárís, looted Khwáf, proceeded to the village of Yashh,4 and came to Baybaq, where two 5 thousand horsemen joined I advanced and took Nishapar, and my affairs prosperod and improved until all Khurásán lay open to me, and I took possession of it for myself. Of all this, these two verses of poetry were the cause."

Salámí relates in his history that the affairs of Almad b. 'Abdu'lláh prospered so greatly that in one night at Níshápár ho distributed in largesso 300,000 dínárs, 500 head of horses, and 1,000 suits of clothes, and to-day ho

¹ Seo Barbiar de Moynard's Duot. Géogr., Hust, et Litt. de la Perse, p. 487. B. and L. have " of Morv."

² Ibid., pp. 213, 214.

كَفَتند مارا هما (1. 126) has كَفَتند مارا The toxt and sense are both very doubtful. A. (1. 126) has كُنتند كه مارا خواجه while the lithograph has عند كه مارا خواجه با ديه بايد '

The MSS. have planty بروستای بشب بیرون شدم, while the lithograph has بروستای . I cannot, however, find mention of the village.

^{*} The lithograph reads "a thousand."

⁶ Concarning Ibn Salura, the author of a Tabaqdiu'sh-Shu'ard (d. A.D. 845-6), who is probably intended, see J.R.A.S. for January, 1899, p. 48, footnote.

stands in history as one of the victorious monorchs, all of which was brought about by these two couplets of poetry. Many similar instances are to be found amongst both the Arabs and the Persians, but we have restricted cursolves to the montion of this one. So a king cannot dispense with a good poet, who shall conduce to the immertality of his name, and shall record his fame in divans and books. For when the king receives that command which none can escape, no trace will remain of his army, his treasure, and his store; but his name will endure for ever by reason of the poet's verse, as Sharif-i-Mujallidi of Gurgán says:—2

از آن چندان نعیم این جهانی ٔ که ماند از آل ساسان و آل سامان ، ثنای رودگی ماندست و دستان ، نوا ا باربد ماندست و دستان ،

"From all the treasures hoarded by the Houses
Of Sixán and of Samán, in our days
Nothing survives except the song of Barbad,
Nothing is left sace Rúdagl's sweet lays."

The names of the monarchs of the oge and the princes of the time are perpetuated by the admirable verse and widely-current poems of this guild; as, for instance, the names of the House of Sámáa by Ustád Abú 'Abdi'lláh Ja'far b. Muḥammad ar-Rūdaki, Abu'l-'Abbás b. 'Abhás az-Zanjí, Abu'l-Mathal al-Bukhárí, Abú Ishaq Júybárí, Abu'l-Hasan al-'Ají, and Tabáwi, and Khabbází of Níshápúr, and Abu'l-Hasan al-Kisá'í ; aud the names of ¹ i.e., when he comes to die.

B omits the poet's name altogether. L. has Majdi.

^{*} al-'Awii's Lubdh, part ii, No. 7.

⁴ Ibid., No. 8, and Hern's ed. of the Lughat-i-Asadi, p. 24, first paragraph.
L. han ازى and A. (f. 12b).

¹ Ibid., No. 25, and Asadi, p. 28.

[&]quot;Ibid., No. 10.

The lithograph omits this name and the naxt; A. (f. 13a) has راحجی ا suppose for راحجی , "onfant courri d'un lait étranger"; while B. has الاعجمى.

^{5 &#}x27;Awfi, No. 29.

Soe Ethé's monograph, Die Lieder des Kied'l.

the kings of the House of Nasiru'd-Din [i.e. the Ghaznavids] by such men as 'Unsuri, 'Asjudi, Farrukhi,' Bahrami,2 Zavnati,2 Buzurimihr of Qá'in,4 Mudhaffar,5 Mansburi, Manuchihri, Mas'udi, Qasarami, Abu Hanifa Iskaf ("the Cobbler"), 10 Rashidi, Abu'l-Faraj of Rúna, 11 Mas'úd-i-Sa'd-i-Salmán, 12 Muhammad Altú Nasr, 13 Shah Abu Rija,14 Ahmad Khaluf, 'Uthman Mukhtari,13 and Saná'í is; and the names of the House of Khagan through Lúlú'í, Gulábí, Najíbí, 17 Farkhúrí, 18 'Am'aq of llukhárá, 19 Rashidi of Samarqand,20 Najjar ("the Carpenter")21 -i-Ságharjí, 'Alí Phnídí, 21 the son of Darghúsh, 23 'Alí

 Abu'l-Hasın 'Ali of Sarakha. See Majma'n'l-Fupahd, vol. î, p. 173.

 Abu'l-Hasın 'Ali of Sarakha. See Majma'n'l-Fupahd, vol. î, p. 173.

 Apanti-i-'Alayi-i-Mahmudl-i-Khurusuni. See M.F., vol. î, p. 60.

 Or Mudhaffari, of l'anj-dib. See M.F., vol. î, p. 600.

 Abu Sa'id Ahmad b. Muhammad of Samarquad. See M.F., vol. i, p. 506.

 See the edition of his Privin by A. de Biberstein Kezinniski.

 Maddal Res Res M.F. is 1800. and his Characterial root. in apartmutts.

Man'udl of Ray (see M.F., i, p. 603), another Ghaznavid poet, is apparently

L. aubstitutes Ghada'iri. For Qayarami see Horn's Asadi, p. 27.

10 Of Mory or Ghazna. See 'Awll's Lubdb, ch. x. No. 21, and M.F., vol. i. pp. 83-85.

 See M. F., i, pp. 70-78.
 Abu'l-Pakhr Mag'ad b, Sa'd b, Salman of Ghazna (died A.n. 515 or 525). See Horn's Lughat-t-Furs of Asadi, p. 23, and M.F., i, p. 514.

13 L. has Majd-i-Nasir. I can find no particulars concerning him.

14 See M.F., i, pp. 68-70. He was of Ghezna, and also bere the lagad of Shihubu'd-Din. 18 Seo Dawlatshah's Tadhlirs (pp. 93, 94 of my forthcoming edition), Tabaqa ii, No. 8.

14 A. adda "Muwjad," an error for "Mujaad." See Dawlatshah (pp. 86-99), Tabaqa ii, No. 9; M.F., i, pp. 234-274.

11 L. omits this name and the next. Najibu'd-Din Jurbadhakaal (i.e. of Gulpáragán) is meant. See M.P., i, pp. 634, 635.

¹⁸ See Dawintshúh (pp. 60, 70), Tabaqa i, No. 18.

¹⁹ See Dawintshúh (pp. 64-67), Tabaqa i, No. 15; M.P., i, pp. 315-350.

²⁰ See Horn's Asadi, p. 18.

²¹ See Anecdote xix, infra; and Horn's Asadi, p. 31.

- 23 The second word is very uncertain. In his conit; And succession, or i.e. بانیدی B., ناییدی; but lower (Aneodote xix), A. has بانیدی وبانیدی, or یانیدی), which I take to be the correct form.
- 23 L. omits. B. has درغوشي. In both MSS, the first word is written , which may stond for بشر, or possibly the correct reading is Bashshdr-i Marghazi. See M.F., i, p. 171.

Well-known contemporaries of Firdawst. Mention is made of the first and last (of whose poems lithographed editions have been published at Tihran) further on.

Sipiliri, Jawhari, Sa'di, the son of Tisha, and 'Ali Shatranji ("the Chess-phyer") 4; and the names of the House of Seljúg by Farrukhí, Karkhání, Lámi í of Dahistán,3 Ja'far of Hamadán, Fírúzí-i-Fakhrí, Barhání, Amír Mu'izzí, Alm'l-Ma'alí of Ray, 8 'Amid Kamalí, 9 and Shihabí 10; and the names of the rulers of Tuburistan through Quart of Gurgán, 11 Ráfi i of Nishapur, 12 Kafayati is of Ganja, Kúsa Fáli, and Búrkaln 14; and the names of the kings of Ghúr, the House of Shansab (may God cause their rule to embure for ever 1), through Abu'l-Qasim Ruff'i, Abu Bakr Jawhari, this least of mankind Nidhami-i-'Arudi, and 'Ali Suli. Thu dicáns of these poets are elequent as to the excellence, concliness, munitions and forces [of war], justice, bounty, worth, nobility, doughty deeds, judgomont, statecraft, heavensent success and influence of these former kings, of whom to-day ne trace remains, nor of their hosts and retinues any survivor. How many nobles there were under these dynastics who cujoyed the favours of kings, and dispensed untold largesses to these poets, and conferred on them sources of income, of whom to-day no trace remains; though many were the painted palaces and charming gardens which they created and embellished, but which to-day are

¹ See 'Awh's Lubab, ch. viii, No. 30; M.P., i, pp. 244, 215; but the identity is uncertain.

² Called "the goldsmith" (Zergar). See Dawlatshih (pp. 118-121). Tabaqa, ii, No. 18.

[.] و برسید ،B ; و بسر تبشه Vary doubtful. Ir. omits. A has Noticed in ch. x of 'Awfi's Lubdb; M.F., i, pp. 344, 345.

⁴ M.F., i, pp. 491-661.

و در نسروز نخری Both MSS. have

The father of Mulizzi. Both are mentioned in Anecdoto vi, infra.

^{* #} M. F., i, pp. 79, 80.

^{*} Kamialu'd-Din 'Amid of Bukbara. See M. F., i, pp. 480, 437.

¹⁶ Shihaba'd-Dia Ahmad b. Mu'ayyad of Nasaf, near Sumarquad. M.F., i, pp. 310, 311.

¹¹ M.F., i, pp. 477, 478.

¹³ M.F., I, pp. 220, 221.

[،] کھائی haa کا تا

¹⁴ L. has Qu'ini for Fall, and omits Burkala.

levelled with the ground and uniform with the deserts and ravines! Says the author:--

بسا کاخا که معمودش بندا کرد ' که از رفسعت همی با مه مرا کرد '

نه ببنی زآن هه یک خشت بر پای ' مدیح عنصری ماندست بر جای '

> "How many a palace did great Muhmid raise, At whose tall towers the Moon did stand at gaze, Whereof one brick remainsth not in place, Though still re-echo 'Unsuri's sweet lays."

When the Monarch of the World Sultán 'Alá'u'dunyá wa'd-Dín Abú 'Alá al-Husayn b. al-Husayn, the Cheice of the Prince of Believers (may his life be long, and the umbrella of his dynasty victorieus) marched on Ghazna to avenge these two martyred kings and laudable menurchs, whom Sultán Bahrámsháh had praviously put to death after the fashion of common thieves, treating them with every indignity, and speaking lightly of them, he sacked Ghazna, and destroyed the buildings raised by Mahmúd, Mas'úd, and Ibráhím, but he bought with gold the poems written in their praise, and placed them in his library. In that army and in that city none dared call them king, yet he himself would read that Sháhnāma wherein Firdawsi says:—

¹ Quibu'd-Din Muhammed and Sayfu'd-Din Süri, both killed by Bahramshah the Ghasnavid, towards the middle of the sixth century of the Flight. From his devastation of Ghazna (A.H. 560, A.B. 1165-6) 'Ala'u'd-Din Husayn the Gharid received the title of Jahán-sús (" the World-consumer").

^{-:} This seutones in obscure in the first portion. It runs as follows in A.:

خداوند عالم بکین خواستن آن دو ملک شهید و پادشاه
حمید [که ۱۸] بغزنین رنت و سلطان بهرامشاه از پیش [او ۸۰]
برفت و در راه دزدان هر دورا شهید کردند و [که ۱۸] استخفافها کرده
بودند و گزافها گفته [و ۱۸] غزنین را غارت کرد

چوکودک لب از شیر مادر بشست و کهواره محمود گوید مخست و کرکت و جهاندار محمود شاه بزرگت و بابشخور آرد همی میش و گرگت و

"Of the child in its cot, ere its lips yet are dry
From the milk of its mother, 'Maḥmud!' is the cry!
Maḥmud, the Great King, who such order doth keep
That in peace from one pool drink the wolf and the sheep!"

All wise men knew that herein was no reverence for Mahmad, but only admiration for Firdowsi and his verso. Had Mahmad understood this, he would probably not have left that noble man disappointed and despairing.

Excursus.

Now the poot must be of tender temperament, profound in thought, sound in genius, clear of vision, quick of insight. He must be well versed in many divors scionces, and quick to extract what is best from his onvironment; for as poetry is of advantage in every science, so is every science of edvantage in poetry. And the poet must be of pleasing conversation in social gatherings, of cheerful countenance on festivo occasions; and his verse must hove attaioed to such o level that it is written on the page of Time and celebrated on the lips and tongues of the noble, and be such that they transcribe it in books and recito it in oities. For the richest portion and most excellent port of poetry is immortal fame, and until it be thus confirmed and published it is ineffectual to this end, and this result cannot secrue from it; it will not survive its outhor, and, being ineffectual for the immertalizing of his name, how can it confer immortality on another?

But to this rook a poet cannot oftein unless in the prime of his life and the season of his youth he commits to memory

20,000 couplets of the poetry of the Ancients and 10,000 verses of the works of the Moderns, holds them constantly before his eyes, and continually reads and marks the diwans of the mosters of his art, observing how they have acquitted themselves in the strait passes and deliceto places of seng, in order that thus the feshion and varieties of verse mov become ingrained in his noture, and the defects and beauties of pootry moy be inscribed on the tablet of his understanding. In this way his style will improve and his genius will develop. Then, when his toste hos been formed by wide reading of poetry, and his style of expression is thus strengthened, let him oddress himself seriously to the poetic ort, study the science of Prosody, and poruse the works of Master Abu'l-Hasan Bahrami of Sarakbs, such as tho "Goal of Prosodists" (Ghayatu'l-'Arudiyyin), tho "Thesaurus of Rhyms" (Kanzu'l-Qáfiya), and the works treating of poetic ideas and phrascology, plagiorisms, biographics, and oll the sciences of this class, with such a master as he deemeth best, that thus he in turn may come to merit the title of Master, that his name may remain on the page of time like the names of those other Masters. which we have mentioned, and that he may be oble to discharge his debt to his patron and lord for what he obtains from him, so that his name may ordure for ever.

Now it behoves the King to patronize such a person, so that he may remoin in his service and calebrate his praise. Bot if he fall below this level, he should weste no money on him and poy no heed to his poetry, especially if he boold; for I have investigated this motter, and in the whole world have found nothing were then on old poet, nor ony money more ill spent then what is given to such. For one so ignoble as not to have discovered in fifty years that what he writes is bad, when will he discover it? But if he be young and has the right talent, even though his verse he not good, there is some hope that it may improve, and according to the Low of Chivolry it is proper to potronize him, a doty to take care of him, and an obligation to maintain him.

Now in the service of kings naught is better than improvisation, for thereby the king's mood is cheered, his receptions are made brilliant, and the poot himself attains his object. Such favours as Rúdagí obtained from the House of Samau by his improvisations and by virtue of his verse, none other bath experienced.

Ancodote xiii.

They relate thus, that Nasa b. Ahmad, who was the central point of the Samanid group, whose fortunes reached their zenith during the days of his rule, was most plenteously equipped with every means of enjoyment and material of splendonr—well-filled treasuries, an efficient army, and loyal servants. In winter he used to reside at Bukhara, his capital, while in summer he used to go to Samaranad or some other of the cities of Khurasan. Now ons year it was the turn of Herat. He spent the spring at Badghis, where are the most charming pasture-grounds of Khurasan and Iraq, for there are nearly a thousand watercourses abounding in water and pasture, any one of which would suffice for an army.

When the beasts had well saten, and had regained their strength and condition, and were fit for warfars or to take the field, Nasr b. Ahmad turned his faces towards Heiát, but halted outside the city of Marghazár-i-Sapíd and there pitched his camp. Cool breezes from the north were stirring, and the fruit was ripening in the districts of Málin and Karákh —fruit which can be obtained in but few places, and nowhers so cheaply. There the army rested. The climate was charming, the breeze cool, food pleatiful, fruit abundant, and the air filled with fragrant scents, so that the soldiers enjoyed their life to the full during the spring and summer.

¹ See Barbier de Meynard's Dict. de la Perse, pp. 467, 511-512, according to which the former village is distant from Herát two parasangs, the latter ton.

Whon Mihrgan 1 arrived, and the juice of the grape came into season, and the eglentine, basil, and yellow rocket were in bleom, they did full justice to the charms of autumn, end took their fill of the pleasures of that season. Milirgan was protracted, for the cold did not wax sovere, end tho gropes proved to bo of exceptional sweetness. district of Herat one hundred and twenty different varieties of the grapo occur, each sweeter and mero delicious than the other; and amongst them ere in particular two kinds which ero not to be found in any other region of the inhabited world, one called Turniyan2 and the other Gulchidi,3 tight-skinned, slender-cored, and luscious, so that you would surely say they were [flavoured with] cinnomon.4 A cluster of Gulchidi grapes sometimes attains a weight of five maunds; they ere black as pitch oud sweet as sugar, nor cen one ent many for the sweetness that is in them. besides these there were all sorts of other delicious fruits.

So the Amír Naṣr h. Aḥmad saw Mihrgán ead its fruits, ond was mightily pleased therewith. Then the nareissus begsn to bloom, and the raisins were plucked and stoned in Málin, and hung up en lines, end packed in chests; end the Amír with his ormy moved into the two groups of hamlets called Ghúre ood Darwáz. There he saw monsions of which each one wes like highest paradise, having before it o gardee or pleasure-ground with a nerthorn espect. There they wintered, while the Mondarin oracges hegoe

41.

¹ The festival of the autumnal equinox, which fell in the old Persian menth of Mahr.

¹ So L. B. has رنيان. A. رنيان. The usual meaning of the word appears to be a sieve or basket made of osiers. See Horn's Asadi, p. 99, 1.1; Snlomann's Shame i Fachrii Lexicon, p. 96, 1.13, and note ad oals.

^{&#}x27;Ilero also the reading is uncortain. I follow A., which seems to read: گوئی که در آن ادار صینی هستی ' ارضی بیست ' to errive from Sistan and the sweet eranges from Mazandarán; and so they passed the winter in the most agreeable manner.

When [the second] spring came, the Amir sent the horses to Badghis and moved his camp to Malin [to a spot] hotwoen two streams. And when summer came, the fruits agnin riponed; and when Mihrgan camo, he said, "Lot us onjoy Mihrgan at Herat"; and so from season to season he continued to procrastinate, until four years had passed in this way. For it was then the heyday of the Samanian prosperity, and the land was flourishing, the kingdom unmenaced by foes, the army loyal, fortune favourable, and heaven auspicious; yet withal the Amir's attendants grow weary, and desire for home aroso within them, while they beheld the King quiescent, the air of Herát in his head and the love of Herat in his heart; and in the course of conversation he would declare that he preferred Herat to the Garden of Eden, and would set its charms above those of the springtide of Beauty.1

So they perceived that he intended to remain there for that summer also. Then the captains of the army and courtiers of the King went to Abu 'Abdn'lláh Rúdagí, than whom there was none more honoured of the King's intimates, and none whose words found so ready an acceptance. And they said to him: "We will present thee with five thousand dínárs if thou wilt contrive some artifice whereby the King may be induced to depart hence, for our hearts are dying for desire of our wives and children, and our souls are like to leave us for longing after Bukhárá." Rúdagí agreed; and since he had felt the Amír's pulse and understood his tempor, he perceived that prose would not affect him, and so had recourse to verse.

¹ So A., which reads بهار حسن; while L. has بهار جبن, "a Chanceo

² See Ethe's excellent managraph, and his article in the Encyclopacdia Bestennica, also p. 62 of the Journal to: January, 1899.

He therefore composed a qaştda; and, when the Amir had taken his morning cup, came in and did ebeisance, and sat down in his place; and, when the musicians ceased, be took up the harp, and, playing the "Lover's air," begun this elogy:—1

بوی جوی مولیان آید همی ' بوی یار مهربان آید همی ' "The Jù-yi-Miliyan we call lo mind, We long for thosa dear friends long loft behind."

Then he strikes a lower key, and sings:-

ریدگت آمو و درشتی راه او ' زیسر پایم پرنمان آید همی ' آب جیتحون از نشاط روی دوست ' خنگت مارا تا مبان آید همی ' ای بخدارا شاد باش و دیدرزی ' مبر زی تو شادمان آید همی ' مسر ماهست و بخدارا آسمان ' ماه سوی آسمان آید همی ' میر سروست و بخدارا بوستان ' سرو سوی بوستان آید همی '

"The sands of Oxus, toilsome though they be,
Beneath my feet were soft as silk to me.
Glad at the friend's return, the Oxus deep
Up to our girths in laughing waves shall leap.
Long live Bukhara! Be thou of good cheer!
Joyous towards thee hasteth our Amir!
The Moon's the Prince, Bukhara is the sky;
O Sky, the Moon shall light thee by and bye!
Bukhara is the mead, the Cypress he;
Receive at last, O Mead, thy Cypress-tree!"

¹ The poem is very well known, being cited in almost all notices of Rudagi's life (e.g. by Dawlatshah), in Forber' Terman Grammas, pp. 19., 2, 161-163, and in Blochmann's Ir analy of the Fersians, pp. 2-3.

When Rúdsgí reached this vorse, the Amír was so much affected that he descended from his throne, bestrode the horse which was on sentry-duty, and set off for Bukhárá so precipitately that they carried his riding-boots ofter him for two parasangs, as far os Burúna, and only then did he put them on; nor did he draw roin anywhere till he reached Bukhárá, and Rúdagí received from the ormy the double of that five thousend dínárs.

At Samorgond, in the year A.H. 504 (= A.R. 1110-1111), I hoard from the Dibqun Abu Rija Ahmad b. 'Abdu's-Samod al-'Abidí as follows:--"My grandfather, the Dihgán Abú Rijá, related that [on this occasion] when Rúdagí reached Samorgand, he had four hundred camels laden with his wealth." And, indeed, that illustrious mon was worthy of this splendid equipment, for no one has yet produced a successful imitation of that elegy, nor found means to surmount triumphantly the difficulties [which the subject presents?. Thus the Poet-laureate Mujizzi was one of the sweetest singers and most graceful wits in Porsis, and his poetry reaches the highest level in freshness and sweetness, and oxcels in fluoncy and charm. Zaynu'l-Mulk Abu Sa'd [b.] Hindú b. Muhammed b. Hindú of Islahán roquested bim to compose an imitation of this questda, and Mu'izzi, unoble to plead his inability so to do, wrote:-

"Now advanceth Rustam from Mázandarán, Now advanceth Zayn-i-Mulk from Isfuhán."

i Khing-s-nauchati. To provide against any sudden energency, a horse, ready saddled and bridled, was kept always at the gate of the King's paluce, and it is this 'sentry-horse' to which reference is here made.

In has با برونه, and in a marginal note explains burken as meaning turbon or handkerchief; but A. has به برونه, and I suspect that it is really a placeuame. Cf. Sachan's remarks on the derivation of al-Birúni's name et p. 7 of his translation of the Chrohology of Ancient Nations.

² See Moutsma's ed. of al-Bundari's History of the Seljugs, pp. 93, 101, 105.

All wise mon will percoive haw great is the difference between this poetry and that; far who can sing with such sweetness as does Rúdagí when he says:—

"Surely are renoton and praise a lasting gain, Even though the royal coffers loss sustain!"

For in this couplet are seven admirable touches of art: first, the verse is apposite; secondly, antithetical; thirdly, it has a refrain; faurthly, it embodies an enunciation of equivalence; fifthly, it has sweetness; sixthly, style; saveathly, energy. Every master of the craft, who has deaply considered the poetic art, will admit, after a little reflection, that I am right.

Anecdote xiv.

The leve harne by Mahmud Yaminu'd-Dawla to Ayaz tha Turk is well knawn and famous. It is related that Ayaz was not ramarkably handsama, but had saveral good points. Of sweet expression and clive complexion, symmetrically farmed, graceful in his movements, sensible and deliberate in action, ha was mightily endawad with all tha arts of courtiership, in which respect, indeed, he had few rivals in his tims. Now these are all qualities which axaite lava and give permanence to friendship.

Naw Mahmud was a piaus and God-faariag man, and he wrestlad with his lave for Ayaz sa that he did nat diverge by so much as a single step from the Path af the Law and the Way of Chivalry. One night, however, at a carousal, when the wine had begue to affect him and lave to stir within him, he looked at the curls of Ayaz, and saw, as it were, ambergris relling over the face of the moon, hyacinths twisted about the visage of the sun, ringlet upon ringlet like a coat of moil; link upon link like a chain; in every ringlet a thousand hearts and under every look a hundred thousand souls. Theroupon love plucked tho roins of self-restraint from the hands of his endurance, and lever-like he drew him to himself. But the watchman of " Hath not God forbulden you to transgress against Him?" thrust forth his head from the collar of the Law, stood before Mahmud, and said: "O Mahmud, mingle not sin with love, nor mix the false with the true, for such a slip will raise the Realm of Love in revolt against thee, and thou wilt fall like thy first father from Love's Paradise. and remain afflicted in the world of Sin." The car of his fortunate nature boing quick to hear, he henrkened to this announcement, and the tengue of his faith cried from his innermost soul, " We believe and we affirm." Then, again, he feared lest the army of his self-control might be unablo to withstand the evolutions of the locks of Avaz, so, drawing a knife, he placed it in the hands of Avaz, bidding him take it and cut off his curls. Ayaz took the knife from his hands with an ohoisanco, and, having enquired where he should cut them, was bidden to cut them in the middle. He therefore doubled back bis locks to get the mensurement, executed the King's command, and laid the two tresses before Mahmud. It is said that this ready obedience became a fresh cause of leve; end Mshmud called for gold and jewels and gave to Ayaz beyond his usual custom and ordinary practice, after which he fell into a drunken sleep.

When the morning hreeze blew upon bim, and he arese from sleep to ascend the Royal Throne, he remembered what he had done. He summened Ayáz and saw the clipped tresses. The army of remorse invaded his heart, and the peevish headache born of wine settled on his brain. He kept rising up and sitting down aimlessly, and none of the courtiers or mon of rank dared to address to him eny onquiry, until at length Hájib 'Alí Qaríb, who was the Chiof Chamberlain, turned to 'Unşurí and snid, "Go, show thyself to him." So 'Unşurí came in and did obeisance.

Maḥmúd raised his head and eaid: "I was just thinking of yon. You see what has happened: eay something on this subject." 'Unsur' said:—

گر عیب سر زلف بت از کاسنی است ' چه جای بغم نشستن و خاستن است ' جای طرب و نشاط و می خواستن است ' کهآراستن سرو ز پیراست ن است '

"Though shame it be a fuir one's curls to shear,
Why rise in wrath or sit in sorrow here?
Rather rejoice, make merry, call for wine;
When elipped the cypress doth most trim appear."

Mahmud was highly pleased with this quatrain, and hade them bring gold and silver, which he mixed together, and therewith thrice filled the poet'e lap. Then he summoned the minstrele before him, and drank wine to [the accompaniment of] these two verses whereby his melanchely had heen dissipated, and recovered the equability of his tempor.

Ancedote xv.

Now you must know that improvisation is the chief pillar of the Poetic Art; and it is incumbent on the poet to train hie talents to such a point as to be able to improvise on any subject, for thus is money extracted from the treasury, and thus can the king be made acquainted with any matter which arises. All this is necessary to please the heart of one'e patron and the humour of him who is the subject of one'e sulogies; and whatever poets have earned in the way of great rewards has been earned by improvisations and poems inspired by the occasion.

Farrukhi was a native of Sietán, and was the son of Júlúgh, the servant of Amír Khalaf. He was possessed of good talents, composed pleasing vorses, and was a skilful performer on the harp; and he was retained in the service of one of the dihgans of Sistan, who gave him a yearly allowance of two hundred measures of corn, each containing five maunds, and a hundred dirhums in silver coinage of Núh [which amply sufficed for his needs]. But he desired to marry o woman of Khalaf's clientage, whereby his expenses were increased, and the baskets and trays were multiplied,2 so that Farrukhi remained without sufficient provision, nor was there io Sistan onyono clee save 3 their amírs. Ho thorefore appealed to the Dihgán, sayiog: "My expenses have been increased; how would it bo if the Dihgán should muke my nllowonco of corn three hundred maunds, and raise my salary by five hundred dirhoms, so that my means may perhaps become equal to my expenditure ?" The Dihgán wroto on the back of the appeal: "So much shall not be refused you, but there is no possibility of ony further increese."

[.] قلوع while Af. F. has جولوع So A., but B. and L. read بحولوع

Seo Defiémory's Histone des Samanides, p. 206.

So Farrukhí was in despair, and made enquiries of such as orrived and passed by to beer of some patron in some region or port of the world who might look upon him with favour, so that he might chance on a success; until at length they informed bim that the Amír Abu'l-Mudhaffar Chighání in Chigháoiyán was a munificent potron of this class, conferring on them splendid presents and rewards, and was at that period conspicuous in this respect aroungst the kings of the age and nobles of the time. On the subject of this choice Farrukhí says:—

باكاروان حلَّه برفتم زسبستان ' با حُلَّهُ تنبده زدل بافته زجان '

¹ The words و أورا تمام بودى are emitted by L.

و کاکه و زنبیل افزود ۲ ۸۰ م

I. has if for , so that the sense would then be "anyone of their amirs."

⁴ Or, in its Arabicized form, $19hdniydn, a place in Transoxania, near Tirmidh and Gubadhiyan. See De Gooje's Bibl. Geogr. Arab., where it is mentioned repeatedly.

"In a caravan of merchandise from Sistan did I start, With fabrics spun within my brain and woven by my heart."

In truth it is a fine elegy that he composed on the Poetic Art, incomparable in the heauty of its culogies.

So Farrukhi, having furnished himself with what was necessary for the journey, set out for Chighaniyan. Ahu'l-Mudhaffar had 18,000 mares, roadsters,1 each one of which was followed by its oolt. And every year the Amir used to go out to brand the mares, and at this moment he happened to be at the place where the branding was dono; while 'Amid As'ad, who was his stoward, was at the capital proparing provisions to be convoyed to the Amir. To him Farrukhi went, and recited a gastda, and submitted to him the peetry he had composed for the Amir.

Now 'Amid As'ad was a man of parts and a poet, and in Farrukhi's vorse he recognized poetry at euco frosh, sweet, pleasing, and masterly, while sociag the man himself to be ill-proportioned, clothed in a torn jubba wern anyhow,2 with a huge turban on his hoad after the manner of the Sagzia, of the most appropossessing appearance from hoad to foot; and this pootry, withal, in the seventh heaven. could not believe that it had been composed by this Sagzi, and, to prove him, said: "The Amir is at the hrandingground, whither I go to wait upon him; and thither I will take thee also, for it is a mighty pleasant spot-

جهانی در جهانی سبزه بسنی '

' World within world of verdure will thou see'- full of toats and lamps like stars, and from each teat come the sengs of Rúdagí, and friends sit together, drinking wine and making merry, while before the Amir's pavilion a great fire is kindled, in size like unto several mountains.

2 Peth u par.

The word is , orphaned in the margin of L as meaning , lice & درنده' whereat they brand the colts. And the King, with the goblet in one hand and the lassoo in the other, drinks wine and gives away herses. Compose, now, n qaşlda, describing the branding-ground, so that I may take thee before the Amír."

That night Farrukhi went and composed the following quilda, which he brought before 'Amid:—1

چون پرند لیلگون بر روی پوشد مرغازا ' پرنیان هفت رنگ اندر سر آرد کوهسار ' خاک را چون ناف آهو مشک زاید بیقیاس ' بیدرا چون پر طوطی برگ روید بیشمار ' دوش وقت نیم شب بوی بهار آورد باد ' حبدا باد شمال و خترما بوی بهار آ باد گوئی مشک موده دارد اندر آستین ' باغ گوئی مشک موده دارد اندر آستین ' باغ گوئی مشک موده دارد اندر آستین ' نسترن لولوی بیضا دارد اندر مرسله ' ارغوان لعل بدخشی دارد اندر گوشوار ' ارغوان لعل بدخشی دارد اندر گوشوار ' تا بر آمد جامهای مرخ مل برشاخ گدل ' پایجه ها چون دست مردم سر فرو کرد از چنار ' باغ بو قلمون لباس و شداخ بو قلمون نمای ' آب مروارید گون وابر مروارید بار '

See pp. 114-117 of the lithographed edition of Farmkhi's works published at Tihran for Mirza Mahdi Khan Baddyn'-nigdr, poetically surnamed Mukhlis, in A.R. 1301. Of the 52 bayts there given, only 22 are cited in the Chahar Maqdia. The poem is also given by Dawlatshah (pp. 55-57 of my forthcoming edition). Only a few of the more important variants are noticed here.

² A gloss in the lithographed Tihran edition explains this word as meaning 'necklaco' (گردن بند).

راست پنداری که خاعتهای رنگین یافتند '
باغیهای پر نسگار از داغسگاد شهریار '
داغگاه شهریار اکنون چسنان خترم شدود '
کانسدرو از خترمی خبره بیماند روزگار '
سیزه اندر سیزه بینی چون سپیر اندر سیهر '
خیمه اندر خیمه بینی چون حدار اندر حمار '
سیزدها پر بانگ چنگ و مطربان چرب دست '
خیمهها با بانسگ نوش و ساتیان میگسار '
هر کجا خیمه است خفته عاشقی با دوست مست '
هر کجا سیزه است شادان یاری از دیسدار یار '
عاشقان بوس و کنار و نیکوان ناز و عستساب '
مطربان رود و سرود و خفتگان خدواب و خمار '

بسر در پرده سرای خسرو پسیروز بخت '
از پسی داغ آتشی افروخته خورشید وار '
بر کشیده آتشی چون مطرد دیبای زرد '
گرم چون طبع جوان و زرد چون زر عیار '
داغها چون شاخهای بسد یاترت رنگ '
هر یکی چون نار دانه گشته اندر زیر نار '
بردگان! خواب نا دیده مصاف اندر مصاف '
مسرکبان داغ نا کرده قسطار اندر قسطار '
خسسرو فترخ سیسر بسر بارهٔ دریا گذر '
با کمند اندر میان دشت چون اسفندیار '

ا له الله بجگان) 'glossed in the margin as 'slave-boys' (غلام بجگان). The Tibran ed has ریدگان 'ayes.'

همچو زلف دابران خورد سالمه تاب خورد ا همچو عدمه دوستان سالخورده استوار ' میر عادل بو المظفّر شاه با پیوستگان ' شبریار شیرگییر و پادشاه شدم دار " اژدها کردار پیچان در کسف رادش کمند ' چون عمای موسوی در دست موسی گشته مار ' هر کرا اندر کمند شصت یازی در فگند ' گشت نامش بر سرین و شانه و رویش نگار ' هرچه زین سو داخ کرد از سوی دیگر میدهد ' شاعران را با لگام و زایران را با فسسار '

"Since the meadow hides its face in satin shot with greens and blues,

And the mountains wrap their brows in silken wills of seven hues,

Earth is teeming like the musk-pod with aromas rich and rare, Foliage bright as parrot's plumage doth the graceful willow wear.

Yestere'en the midnight breezes brought the tidings of the spring:

Welcome, O ye northern gales, for this glad promise which ye bring!

Up its sleevo the wind, mescometh, pounded musk hath stored away,

While the garden fills its lap with shining dolls, as though for play.

L. substitutes ' Fakhr-i-Dawlat.'

[.] شادمان و شادخوار و کامران و کامکار ' The Tihran ed. has: ' شادمان و شادخوار و کامران

ع So A. L. has دابش

So A. and L. The ed. ham ' אנט נוב .

On the branches of syringa necklaces of pearls we see, Ruby carrings of Badakshán sparkle on the Judas-tree. Since the branches of the rose-bush carmine cups and beakers bore Human-like five-fingered hands reach downwards from the sycamore.

Gardens all chameleon-coated, branches with chameleon whorls, Pearly-lustrous pools around us, clouds above us raining pearls? On the gleaming plant this cout of many colours doth appear Like a robe of honour granted in the court of our Amir.

For our Prince's Camp of Branding stirreth in these joyfut days,

So that all this age of ours in joyful wonder stands agaze.

Green within the green you see, like skies within the firmament;
Like a fort within a fortress spreads the army, tent on tent.

Every tent contains a lover resting in his sweetheart's arms,

Every patch of grass revealeth to a friend a favourite's charms.

Harps are sounding 'midst the verdure, minstrels sing their lays divine.

Tents resound with clink of glasses as the pages pour the wine.

Kisses, claspings from the lovers; coy reproaches from the fair;

Wine-born stumbers for the sleepers, while the minstrels wake the air.

Branding fires, like suns ablaze, are kindled at the spacious gate Leading to the State-pavilion of our Prince so fortunate.

Leap the flames like gleaming tances droped with yellow-lined brocado, Hotter than a young man's temper, yellower than gold assayed.

Bronding tools like coral branches ruby-tinted glow amain

In the fire, as in the ripe pomegranate glows the crimson groin.

Rank on rank of active boys, whose watchful eyes no elumber know:

Steeds which still await the branding, rank on rank and row on row.

On his horse, the river-forder, roams our genial Prince afar, Ready to his hand the lassoo, like a young Infandiyar. Like the locks of pretty children see it how it curls and bends, Yet be sure its hold is stronger than the covenant of friends, Bu'l-Mudhoffar Shah the Just, surrounded by a noble band, King and conqueror of cities, hrave defender of the land. Serpent-coiled in skilful hands fresh forms his whirling noose doth take,

Like unto the rod of Moses metamorphosed to a snake.
Whosoever hath been captured by that nooss and circling line,
On the face and flank and shoulder ever bears the Royal sign.
But, though on one side he brands, he giveth also rich rewards, Leads his poets with a bridle, binds his guests as though with cords."

When 'Amíd As'ad heard this elegy, he was everwhelmed with amazement, for never had the like of it reached his cars. He put aside all his business, mounted Farrukhi on a horse, and set out for the Amír, whose presence he entered about sundown, saying: "O Siro, I bring thee a poet the like of whom the eye of Time hath not seen since Daqíqi's face wes veiled in death." Then he related what had passed.

So the Amír accorded Farrukhí an audience, and when he came in he did roveronce, and the Amír gave him his hand, and assigned him an honourable place, enquiring after his health, treating him with kindness, and inspiring him with hopes of favours to come. When the wine had gone round several times, Farrukhí arose, and, in a sweet end plaintive voice, recited his elegy, beginning:—

باكاروان حلَّه برفتم زسيستان ٬ با حلَّهُ تنيده زدل بافته زجان ٬

"In a caravan of merchandise from Sistan did I start,
With fabrics spun within my brain and woven in my heart."

When he had finished, the Amír, himself something of a poet, expressed his astonishment at this qaştda. 'Amid As'ad said, "Wait till you see!" Farrukhí was silent until the wine had produced its full effect on the Amír, then he arose and recited this elegy on the branding-ground. The Amír was amazed, and in his admiration turned to Farrukhí, saying: "They have brought in a thousand colts, ell with white forcheads, fetlocks, and feet. a cuoning rascal, a Sagzi; eatch as many es thou ert nhle, thet they may be thine." Ferrukhi, on whom the wino had produced its full effect, came out, took his turban from his head, hurled himself into the midst of the herd, oud chased a drove of them before him across the plain; but, though be caused them to gallop hither and thither, be could not catch a single one. At length e ruined rest-house situated on the edge of the camping-ground came into view, and thither the colts fled. Farrakhi, being tired out, placed his turban under his head in the porch of the rest-house, and at once went to sleep, by reason of his extreme weeriness and the effects of the wino. When they counted the colts, they were ferty-two in number. The Amír, on being told of this, laughed and said: "He is a lucky fellow, and will come to great things. Look ofter him, and look ofter the colts as well. When he ewakes, woken me too." So they obeyed the King's orders.

Next day, after sunrise, Farrukhí erose. The Amír had nlready risen, and, when he had performed his prayers, he gave Farrukhí an audience, treated him with great consideration, end handed over the colts to his attendants. He also ordered Farrukhí to be given a horse end equipments suitable to a man of renk, as well as a tent, three camels, five slaves, weering appored, and carpsts. So Farrakhí prespered in his service, and enjoyed the greatest circumstance, and waited upon Sultán Mahmúd, who, seeing him thus magnificently equipped, regarded him with the same regard, and his affairs reached that pitch of prosperity which they reached, so that twenty servants, girt with silver girdles rode behind him.

Anecdote xvi.

In the year A.H. 510 (A.D. 1116-1117) the King of Islam Sanjar, the sen of Malikshah the Seljuq (mey God be merciful to him!), chanced to be encomped at the spring season within the merches of Tus, in the plain of Taruq, when I, in hopes of obtaining some favour, joined his Court from Herát, having then nothing in the way of equipment or provision. I composed a qaşhia and went to Mu'izzi, the Poet-laurente, to seek for his counsel and support. He looked at my poom, and, having tested my talents in several ways, behaved in the most noble manner, and deemed it his duty to act in the way besitting so great a man.

One day I expressed in his presence a hope that Fortune would be more favourable to me, and complained of my luck. He answered genially: "Then hast laboured hard to acquire this science, and hast fully mastered it: surely this will have its effect. My own case was precisely similar; and good poetry has never yet been wasted. Thou hast a goodly share in this art: thy verse is even and melodious, and is still improving. What and see the advantages which thou wilt reap from this science. For though Fortune should at first be gradging, matters will eventually turn out as thou wishest.

"My futher Burháni, the Poot-laureate (may God be merciful to him!), passed away from this transitory to that oternal world in the town of Qazwin in the early part of the reign of Maliksháh, outrusting me to the King in this verse, since then become famous:—1

"So my fathor's salary and allowances were transferred to me, and I became Malikaliali's court-poet, and spent a year in the King's service; yet was I unable to see him save from a distance, nor did I get one dinar of my salary or one maund of my allowances, while my expenditure was increased. I became involved in debt, and my hrain was perplexed by my affairs. For that great Minister the Nidhamu'l-Mulk (may God be morciful to him!) had no opinion of poets, because he had no skill in their art; nor did he pay uny attention to any oue of the religious leaders or mystics.

¹ This verse, to which are added soveral others, is commonly ascribed to the Nighamu'l-Mulk, og by Dawlaishan (p 59 of my forthcoming edition). Apart from the improbability that one who lay dying of a meetal wound would be in the mood to compose verses, we leave from this encodote that the Nighamu'l-Mulk '' had no opinion of pools because he had no skill in their art '' The verse which gives has age as 94 at the time of his death (he was actually 80 at most) is alone enough to discredit the story.

"One day-it was the ove of the day on which the new moon of Ramadan was due to appear, and I had not a farthing for all the expenses incidental to that month and the feast which follows it-I went thus sad at heart to tho Amir 'Ali Faramarz' 'Ala'u'd-Dawla, a man of royal parentage, a lover of poetry, and the intinate companion and son-in-law of the King, with whom he enjoyed the highest honour and before whom he could speak boldly, for he held high rank under that administration. And he had already been my patron. I said: 'May my lord's life be long! Not all that the father could do can the son do, nor does that which accrued to the father accrue to the son. My fathor was a bold and energetic man, and was sustained hy his art, and the martyred King Alp Arslan, the lord of the world, ontertained the highest opiniou of him. But what he could do that can I not, for modesty forbids me. I have served this prince for a year, and have contracted dobts to the extent of a thousand dinárs, and have not received a farthing. Crave permission, then, for thy servent to go to Nishapur, and discharge his dobts, and live on that which is left over, and express his gratitude to this victorious Dynasty.

"Thou speakest truly,' replied Amír 'Alí: 'wo havo all been at fault, but this shall be so no longor. The King, at the time of Evening Prayer, will go up to look for the mooa. Thou must be prosent there, and we will see what Fortune will do.' Thereupon he at once ordered me to receive a hundred diuárs to defray my Ramadán expensos, and a purse containing this sum is Nishapar coinage was ferthwith brought and placed before me. So I returned mightily well pleased, and made my preparations for Ramadan, and at the time of the second prayer went to the King's pavilien. It chanced that 'Ala'u'd-Dawla arrived at the very same moment, and I paid my respects to him. 'Than hast done excellently well,' said he, 'und hast come punctually.' Then he dismounted and went in before the King.

¹ Probably 'Ali b. Fuimarz the Kükwayhid is intended See Lane's Muhammadan Dynasties, p. 145.

"At sundown the King came forth from his pavilion, with a cross-bow in his hand and 'Alá'n'd-Dawla on his right hand. I ran forward to do obeisance. Amír 'Alí continued the kindnesses he had already shown mo, and then busied himself in looking for the moon. The King, however, was the first to see it, whereat he was mightily pleased. Then 'Alá'n'd-Dawla said to me, 'O son of Burhání, say something appropriate,' and I at once recited these two couplets:—

ای ماہ چو ابروان یاری گوئی ' یا نی چو کمان شهریاری گوئی ' نعلی زده از زر عیداری گوئی ' بدرگوش سپهر گوشواری گوئی '

'Methinks, O Moon, thou art our Prince's bow, Or his curved eyebrow, which doth charm us so, Or else a horse-shoe wrought of gold refined, Or ring from Heaven's ear depending low.'

"When I had submitted these verses, Amir'Ali applicated, and the King said: 'Go, loose from the stable whichever horse thou pleasest.' When I was close to the stable, Amir'Ali designated a horse which was brought out and given to my attendants, and which proved to be worth 300 dinars of Nishapar. The King then went to his oratory, and I performed the evening prayer, after which we sat down to meat. At the table Amir'Ali said: 'O son of Burhani'l Thou has not yet said anything about this favour conferred on thee by the lord of the world. Compose a quatrain at once!' I thereupon sprang to my feot and recited thesa two verses:-

چون آتش خاطر مرا شاه بدید ' از خاک مرا بر زبر ساد کشید ' چون آب یکی ترانه از من شنید ' چون باد یکی مرکب خاصم بخشید '

'The King beheld the fivo which in me blazed:
Me from low earth above the moon he raised:
From me a verse, like water fluent heard,
And swift as wind a noble steed conferred.'

"Whon I recited these versos 'Alá'u'd-Dawla warmly applauded me, and by reason of his applause the King gava me a thousand dináre. Thon 'Alá'a'd-Dawla eaid: 'Ho hath not yet received his salary and allowances. To-morrow I will sit by the Minister until he writes a draft for his salary on Isfahan, and orders his allowances to be paid out' of the treasury.' Said the King: 'Thou must do it, thon, for no one else has sufficient boldness. And call this poet after my title.' Now the King's title was Mu'issn'd-Dunyd wa'd-Din, so Amír 'Ali oalled ma Mu'izzi. 'Amir Mu'izzi,' said the King, [correcting him]. And this noble lord wss so zealous for me that next day, by the time of the first prayer, I had received a thousand dinárs as a gift, twelva hundred more as allowances, and an order for a thousand maunda of corn. And when the month of Ramadán was past, he summoned me to a private audience, and caused me to become the King's boon-companion. So my fortune began to improve, and thenoeforth he made enduring provision for me, and to-day whatever I have I possess by the favour of that Princo. May God, blessed and exalted is He, rejoice his dust with the lights of His Mercy, by His Fayour and His Graca!"

Anecdole xvii.

The House of Seljug were all fond of poetry, but none mere so than Tughan Shah b. Alp Arslan, whose coaversation and intercourse was entirely with poets, and whose favourite companions were almost all of this classmea such as Amír Abú 'Abdu'lláh Qurushí, Abú Bukr Azraqí, Abú Manşúr, Abú Yúsuf, Shujá'í of Fasa, Ahmad Budihi,3 Haqiqi and Nasimi, all of whom enjoyed a definite etatus, while many others kept coming and going, all departing with gifts and joyful countenances.

One day the King was playing backgammon with Ahmed Badihi. They were finishing a game for [a stake of] ten thousand [dinars], and the Amir had two pieces in the sixth house and Ahmad Badihi two pieces in the first house !; end it was the Amir's throw. He throw with the most deliberate care, in order to cast two sixes, instead of which he threw two ones, whereat he was mightily vexed and left the board, while his anger rose ee high and reached such a pitch that each moment he was like to put his hand to his sword, and his courtiers trombled like the leaves of a tree, seeing that he was a king, and withal a boy sagered at such spite of Fortune.

Then Abu Bakr Azraqi arose, and, approaching the minstrels, recited this quatrain:-

11

¹ Called by Rida-quli Khûn (M. F., 1, 139) Tughinshih b. Malik-i-Mu'nyyad.

See Houtama's Hist. des Seloncides de herman, pp. 111, 119, 142.

1 'Awii'a Liebd, ch. x, No. 3; Dawlatshih (pp. 72-73 of my cd), Tabaqa ii, No. 1; and M.F., vol. i, pp. 139-152.

M.F., i, p. 169. His lagad was Majdu'd-Din and his nista Sajiwandi.

4 For the explanation of this passage I am indebted to my hiend Mirzk 'Abdu'l-Ghaffar of the Persian Legation. The six 'houses' on each side of the hackgammon board are named (proceeding from left to right) as follows;

(1) khal-khda or yak-gdh, (2) di-khan, (3) si-khdu, (4) chahar-khan, (5) bdf-dar, (6) shish-khdu or shish-dat-gith. The munibers contained in these names aliude to the numbers which must be thrown with the dite to get the pieces which occupy them off the basid.

آن زخم که کرد رای شاههندشه یاد ' در خدمت شاه روی بر خماک نهاد '

"Reproach not Fortune with discourteous tricks
If by the King, desiring double six,
Two ones were thrown; for whomsoe'er he calls
Face to the earth before him prostrate falls."

When I was at Herát in the year A.R. 500 (A.D. 1115-1116), Abú Manyúr and Abú Yúsuf related to me that the Amír Tughúnsháh was so charmed and delighted with these two verses that he kissed Azraqí on the eyes, called for gold, end successively placed five hundred dínárs in hie meuth, continuing thus to reward him so long as one gold piece was left. Thus did he recover hie good humeur and such largesso did he bestow, and the cause of all this was one quetrain. Mey God Almighty have morey on both of them, by His Favour and Grace!

Anecdote xviii.

In the yeer A.H. 472 (A.D. 1079-1080) a certain epiteful person laid a etatement before Sultan Ibrahim to the effect that his son, Mahmud Soyfu'd-Dawle, intended to go to 'Iraq to Malikshah. The King's jeulousy was aroused, and it so worked on him that suddenly he had his son seized, bound, and interned in the fortress of Nay. His son's intimates also he arrested and interned, amongst them Mas'ad-i-Sa'd-i-Sulman, whom he sent to Vajiristan, to ¹ The two MSS. and L. all have "672," an evident error, for (1) Sultan Ibrahim the Ghaznavid reigned a.m. 451-492 (a.D. 1059-1099); (2) Malikshah reigned a.m. 465-485 (a.D. 1072-1092), (3) the poet in question died in a.m. 515 or 525 (a.D. 1121 or 1130); (4) the Chahar Maqdia, as we have already seen, was written during the lifetime of Sultan 'Ala'u'd-Din Russyn Jahdneuz, i.e. before a.n. 556 (a.D. 1161).

² So A., L.: B. has اورا ابو جبرستان. I canuot identify the word, and suspect that the reading is wrong.

the Castle of Nay; whence he sent to the King the following quatrain which he had composed:—

در بند تو ای شاه ملک شه باید ' تا بند تو پای تاجداری ساید ' آن کس که زپشت سعد سلمان آید ' گرزهر شود ملک ترا نگزاید '

"O King, 't is Malikshuh should wear thy chain, That royal limbs might fret with captive's pain, But Sa'd-i-Salman's offspring could not hurt, Though venomous as poison, thy domain!"

'All Kháss brought this quatrain to the King, but it produced no effect on him, though all wise and impartial critics will recognize what rank Mas'úd's poems of captivity' hold in lofty feeling, and what degree in elequence. Sometimes, when I read his verses, the hair stands on end on my body, and the tears are like to trickle from my eyes. But when these verses were read to the King, and he heard them, they affected him not at all, and not one particle of his heing was warmed to onthusiasm, so that he departed from this world leaving that noble man in prison. Khwájs Salmán says:—²

مقصور شده مصالح کار جهانیان ' بر حبس و بند این تن مجمور ناتوان ' بسر حبس و بند نیز ندارندم استوار ' تما گرد من ندارند ده تن نگاهبان ' هر ده نشسنه بر در و در بام سجن من ' بما یکدگر دمادم بگویند همر زمان ' هان بر جهید زود که حیلتگریست او ' کمز آدتاب بهل کند از سایه نردبان '

¹ I adopt B.'s reading, culture. A. has culture; L. culture.

These verses are inserted in the margin of A. (f. 20*) only.

گسرم کسه سساخته شسوم از بهرکارزار ' ببرون جهم زگوشهٔ ابن سجن ناگهان با چند کس بر آبم در قلعه گرچه من ' شیری شوم معربد و پېلی شوم دمان یس سے سلام جنگ چگونہ کئم مگر' مدن سینه را سپرکنم و پشت را کمان '

" Naught served the ends of statermen save that I, A helpless exile, should in fetters lie, Nor do they deem me safe within their cells, Unless surrounded by ten sontinels; Which ten sit ever by the gates and walls, And ever one unto his comrade calls: 'Ho there! On guard! This cunning rogue is one To fashion bridge and steps from shade and sun !' Why, grant I stood arrayed for such a fight, And suddenly sprang forth, attempting flight, Could elephant or raging lion hope, Thus cramped in prison-cage, with ten to cope? Can I, bereft of weapons, take the field. Or make of back and bosom bow and shield?"

So, by reason of his relation to Sayfu'd-Dawla, he remained imprisoned for twelve years in the days of Sultau Ibrahim. And Abu Nasr of Pars, on account of his like relation, wes imprisoned for eight years, though none bath been heard of who hath produced so many splendid elegies and rare gems of verse as were born of his brilliant geoius. After eight 2 years Tahir 'Alí of Múshkan, Thiqatu'l-Mulk, brought him forth from his hondago, so that, in short, during this King's reign that illustrious man spent all his life in emptivity, and the ill repute of this deed remained on this House. I hesitate as to the motivos which are to be assigned to this act, and whother it is to be ascribed to strength of purpose, or n heedless nature, or hardness of heart, or n mulicious disposition. In any enso it was not n laudable deed, and I have never not with any sensible man who was propared to praise that dynasty for such inflexibility of purpose or excess of caution. And I heard it remarked by the King of the World Ghiyathu'd-Din wn'd-Dunyá Muhammad,1 the son of Maliksháh, nt the Gntes of Hamadan, on the occasion of the rebellion of his son-in-law, Aiair Shihabu'd-Din Qutuliaush Alp Ghazi: "It is the sign of a mulicious heart to keep a fee imprisoned, for one of two things, either he means well or ill. Then, if the former, it is an injustice to keep him in prison; and if the latter, it is again an injustice to suffer an ill-door to live." In short that misery of Mas'ud passed, while this ill repute will oudure till the Resurrection.

L has 'twenty.'

I can find no mention of a poet of this name, and am melined to think that the author of the oldest extent Persian version of Kallla and Dimma (htthographed at Tabriz, A. H. 1305) is meant—In this volume his name is given as Nighami'd-Din Abu'l-Ma'ali Naşru'liah h. 'Abdu'l-Hamid, but in M. F. (vol. 1, p. 655) as Naşru'd-Din [b.] 'Abdu'l-Hamid-1-First-1-Shirari. Some of the verses which he composed in prison are there cited.

Anecdote xix.

In the time of Sultan Khidr b. Ibrahim the power of the Khaqanis was at its most flourishing period, while the strength of their administration and the respect in which it was held were such as could not be surpassed.

Now he was n wise, just, and sagacious ruler, and to him apportuined the dominion of Transoxama and Turkistan, while he enjoyed the most complete security on the side of Khurasan, wherewith he was allied by friendly relations, kinship, and firm trentises and covenants. And of the splendaur maintained by him one detail was this, that when he rode out they carried before his horse, besides other arms, soven hundred maces of gold and silver. Ha was, moreover, a great patron of poots, and in his service were Amir Am'ng,1 Muster Rushidi,2 Najjar-i-Sagharchi, 'Ali Pauidi, the sou of Darghush, the son of Islanayini, 'Ali Sipihri,3 and Nujihi of Farghana, all of whom obtained rich rewards and vast honours. The Poet-laureate was Amír 'Ain'ag, who had profited abundantly by that dynasty and obtained the most ample circumstance, comprising fair damsels, woll-paced horses, golden vessols, sumptuous apparel, and servants, biped and quadruped, innumorable. Ho was greatly honoured at the King's Court, so that of necessity the other poets must needs do him reverence. Such homage . as from the others he desired from Master Rushidi also, but herein he was disappointed, for Rashidi, though still young, was nevertheless learned in his art. The Ludy Zaynab was the special object of his panegyries, and he eujoyed the fullost favour of the King, who was continually praising him and asserting his merits, so that Rashidi's affairs prospered, the title of "Prince of poets" 6 was conferred ou him, he continued to rise higher in the King's opinion, and from him received gifts of great value.

¹ The seventh Seljuq king, who reigned a.m. 498-511 (a. D. 1104-1117).

² The dynasty called tlak Khans (see Lane's Michanisedan Dynasties, pp. 131-134) seems to be meant. It has 'Sommis' Khan khan b Aba'l-Midhaffar 'Imada'd-Dawla Ibiuhim Tafghuj khan seigned about a.m. 472-188 (a. D. 1079-1046).

One day, in Rashidi's absocce, the King asked 'Am'aq: "What thinkest thou of the verso of Rashidi, 'tho Prince of poets'?" "His verse," replied ho, "is extremely good and chaste and correct, but it wants spice."

After some while had clapsed, Rashidi came in and did obeisance, and was about to sit down whon the King called bim before himself, and said, teasing him as is the way of kings: "I asked the Poet-laureato just now, 'How is Rasbidi's poetry?' He roplied that it was good, but wanted spice. Now you must compose a quatram on this

See a 19 on p. 46 supra.
 Mentioned briefly in the Atachkada amongst the poets of Mawara'u'a-Nahr.

See n. 22 on p 46 supra.
 See n. 23 on p 46 supra.
 See n. 1 on p. 47 supra. Bayyıdu'sh-Shu'ai a subject." Rashidi, with a bow, sat down in his place and improvised the following fragment:-

شعرهای مرا به ببنمکی ' عبب کردی روا بود شاید ' شعر من همچو شکر و شهدست ' و اندرین دو نمک نکو تآید ' شاغم و باقلاست گفتهٔ تو' نمک ای قلتبان ترا باید '

"You stigmatize my verse as 'wanting spice,'
And possibly, my friend, you may be right.
My verse is honey-flavoured, sugar-sweet,
And spice with such could scarcely cause delight.
Spice is for you, you blackguard, not for me,
For beans and turnips is the stuff you write!"

When he recited these verses the King was mightily pleased. And in Transoxania it is the custom and practice to place in the audience-chambers of kings and others gold and silver in trays which they call sim-taga or juft; and in this audience of Khidr Khán's there were set four trays of red gold, each containing two hundred and fifty dínárs; and these he used to dispense by the handful. On this day he ordered Rashidi to receive all four trays, so he obtained the highest honour, and became famous. For just as a patron becomes famous by the verse of a good poet, so do poots likewise achieve renowe by receiving a great reward from the king, these two things being interdependent.

Anecdote XX.

Master Abu'l-Qásim Firdawsí 2 was one of the Dihqáns of Tús, from a village called Bázh, in the district of [.] سم طان و . . . آ ; سبم طاق یا . . . B. ; سم طاقا یا . . ۱۰ ،

This anecdote is cited by Ibn Islandiyar in his History of Tobaristics (A.H. 613, A.D. 1216: see Rieu's Penuan Chialogue, pp. 202-204 and 6334), whence it was occupted and published, with a German translation, by Ethé (X.D.M.G., vol. xlvin, pp. 89-94). It was also utilized by Noeldeke in his Jianische Nationalepon (Grundries d. Isan. Philologie, vol. 11, p. 150 et seqq.).

Tabarán, a lorge village capable of supplying a thousand There Firdawsi enjoyed on excellent position, so that he was rendered quite independent of his neighbours by the income which he derived from his lends, and he had but one child, e daughter. His one desire in putting the Book of Kings (Shahnama) into verse was, out of the roward which he might obtain for it, to supply her with an adequate dowry. And to this end be left nothing undone, raising his verse as high as heaven, oud causing it in sweet fluoncy to resemble running water. What genius, indeed, could raise verse to such o height os he does in the letter written by Zál to Sám the son of Nariman in Mázandarán, when he desired to ally himself with Rúdába the daughter of the King of Kábul:-2

یکی نامه فرمود نزدیسک سام ' سسراسر درود و نسویسد و سسلام ' محفست از جهان آفرین یاد کرد ' که هم داد فرمود وهم داد کرد ' وزو باد بسر سام نسيسرم درود ' خداوند شمشبر وگوپال و خود ' چمانندهٔ چرمسه هنگام کرد ' چرانندهٔ کرگس اندر نبرد ' فزايت ده باد آوردگاه ' فشانندهٔ خدون زاير سياه ' بمردی هندر در هنر ساخته " هنرش از هنرگردن انراخته "

[&]quot; Then to Sam straightway sent he a letter, Filled with fair praises, prayers, and good greeting. First made he mention of the World-Maker, Who doom dispenseth and doom fulfilleth. On Niram's son Sam,' wrote he, ' the sword-lord, Mail-clad and mace-girt, may the Lord's peace rest! Hurler of horse troops in hot-contested fights, Feeder of carrion-fowls with formen's flesh-feast,

A., B., L. all have "Tabaristan." See, however, Noeldeke, loc. cit., Turner Macan'e edition of the Shakndma (Calentia, 1829).

Raising the roar of strife on the red war-field, From the grim war-clouds grinding the gore-shower. Who, by his manly might merit on merit Heaps, till his merit merit outmeasures." 1

In oloquonco I know of no poetry in Persian which equals this, and but little even in Arabic.

When Firdawsi had completed the Shahnama, it was transoribed by 'Alí Daylam 2 and recited by Abú Dulaf,2 both of whom be mentions by name in tendering his tbanks to Ha'fy-i-Qutayba, the governor of Tus, who had conferred on Firdawsi many favours :-

ازین نامه از نامداران شهر ٔ علی دیلم و بو دلف راست بهر ٔ نيامد جز أَحْسَنْتَشَان بهراه ' بكفت اندر أحْسَنْتَشَان زهردام ' حدُی قتیبه است از آزادگان ' که از من اعزاهد سخن رایگان ' نَيِّم آگه از اصل و فرع خراج ٬ همي غلطم اندر ميان دواج ٬

" Of the men of renown of this city 'All Daylam and Abu Dulaf have participated in this book.

From them my portion was naught save ' Well done!'

My gall-bladder was like to burst with their ' Well dones.'

Ha'iy the son of Qutayba is a nobleman who asks me not for unrewarded verse.

I am cognizant neither of the principles nor the applications of tax-collecting;

I lounge [at ease] in the midst of my quilt," s

See Noeldoke, loc. cit., p. 153, and n. 2 nd cate.
 So A. and L. B. has the more usual "Husayn b. Qutayb." Cf. Noeldoke, ie., I am sick of their harren and unprofitable plaudits. As these poor men rendered him materiel service to other ways, Firdawsi's remarks seem rether ungrateful. What follows is evidently an explanation of this couplet. Firdawst means that being no longer vexed with the exactions of the tax-getherer, be can now repose in peace.

¹ Poor as this rendering is, I am strongly of opinion that for an English rendering of the Shdhudma (which always seems to me very analogous in aim, scope, and treatment to that little-rend English opic, the Brut of Layamon), the old English elliterative verse would be the most suitable form.

Ha'íy the son of Qutaybe wes the revenue-collector of Tus, and deemed it his duty at least to abute the taxes payable by Firdawsi; hence naturally his neme will endure till the Resurrection and kings will read it.

So 'Ali Daylam transcribed the Shidhadma in soven volumes, and Firdawsi, taking with him Abu Dulef, set out for Ghazna. There, by the help of the great Minister Ahmad Hasan! the secretary, he presented it, and it was accepted, Sultan Mehmud expressing himself as greatly indebted to his Minister. But the Prime Minister had enemies who were continually casting the dust of perturbation into the cup of his position, end Mahmud consulted with them as to what he should give Firduwsi. They replied: "Fifty thousand dirhams, and even thet is too much, seeing thet he is in belief a Rafidi end a Mu'tazilite. Of his Mu'tazilite views this verse is e proof:—

به بینندگان آفریننده را ' نبینی مرمجان دو بیننده را ' Thy gaze the Creator can never descry;
Then wherefore, by gazing, dost weary thine eye?'

" whilo to his Ráfidí proclivities these verses of his witness:

خداوند "گیتی چو دریا نهاد ' بر انگیخنه و از آن تند باد '

چو هفتاد کشتی دران ساخنه ' همه بادبانها بسر انسراخته '
میانه یکی خوب کشتی عروس ' بر آراسته همچو چیشم خروس '

پیمبر بدو اندران با علی ' همه اهل بیت نبی و ولی '

اگر خلد خواهی بدیگر سرای ' بسنزد نبی و وصی گیر جای '

گرت زین بد آید گناه منست ' چنبن دان و این راه راه منست '

برین زادم و هم بریس بگذرم ' یقین دان که خاک پی حیدرم '

» Both MSS. have مخرد مند

¹ So A., B., and L. Noeldeke (loc. cit., p. 163) has Husayn b. Ahmad.

When the Lord of the World established the Sea, the fierce wind stirred up waves thereon, Thereon, as it were, seventy ships wrought, all with sails set.

Amongst them one vessel, fair as a bride, decked with colour like the eye of the cook, Therein the Prophet with 'All, and all the household of the Prophet and his Vicar.

If thou desirest Paradise in the other World, take thy place by the Prophet and his Trustee.

If ill accrues to thee thereby, it is my fault: know this, that this way is my way.

In this I was born, and in this I will pass away: know for a surety that I am as dust at the feet of 'Ali.' "

Now Sultan Mahinud was n zealot, and ho lietened to these imputatione and caught hold of them, and, to be brief, only twenty thousand dirhams were paid to Hakim Firdawsi. He was bittorly disappointed, went to the bath, and, on coming out, bought a drink of eherbet,2 nnd divided the money between the buth-man and the sherbet-seller. Knowing, however, Mahinud's severity, he fled from Ghazna, and alighted in Herát at the shop of Azraqi's father, Isma'il the bookseller (Warraq), where he remained in hiding for six months, until Muhmud's messengers had reached Tus and had turned back thenco, when Firdawsi, feeling secure, set out from Herat for Tue, taking the Sháhnáma with him. Thonce he came to Tabaristán to the Sipahbad Shir-zád of the House of Bávand, who was king there; and this is n noble house which traces its descent from Yazdigird the son of Shahriyar.

Then Firdnwsi wrote e eatire on Sultan Mahmud in the Preface, and read a hundred couplets to Shir-zad, saying: "I will dedicate thie Shahnama to you instead of to Sultan Mahmud, for this book deals wholly with the legoude end deeds of thy forebears." Shir-zad treated him with honour

1, 1

So A. and B., but I. has "sixty thousand."
 Fuqd', described as a kind of beer.
 Cf. Noeldeke, loc. cit., p. 155, and p. 4 ad calc., where this rules a name is given as the Ispahbad Shahriyar b. Sharain.

and showed him many kindnesses, and said: "Mahmud was induced to act thus by others, who did not submit your book to him under proper conditions, and misropresented you. Moreover, you are a Shiito, and to ano who loves the Family of the Prophet nothing will happen which did not happon to them. Muhmud is my liego-lord: let the Shahnama stand in his name, and give me the satire which you have written on him, that I may expunge it and give you some little recompense; and Mahmud will surely summan theo and scok to satisfy theo fully. Do not, then, throw away the labour spent on such a book." And next day he sent Firdawsi 100,000 dirhams, saying: "I buy ouch couplet at a thousand dirlams; give me these hundred couplets, and rest satisfied therewith." So Firdawsi sont him these vorses, and he ordered them to be expunged; and Firdawsi also destroyed his rough copy of thom, so that this satiro was done away with, and only these few versos remained :- 1

مرا غمرة كردند كآن پر سخن ' بمهر نبي و على شد كهن ' اگر مهرشان من حكايت كنم ' چو محمودرا صد حمايت كنم ' پرستار زادة نيسآيد بكار ' وگرچند باشد پدر شهريار " ' به نيكى نبد شاهرا دستگاه ' وگرنه مرا بر نشاندى بگاه ' چو اندر تبارش بزرگي نبود ' ندانست نام بيزرگان شنود '

"They cast imputations on me, saying: 'That man of many words

Hath grown old in the love of the Prophet and 'Ali,'
If I speak of my love for these
I can protect a hundred such as Mahmud.

¹ This is a remarkable statement, and, if true, would involve the assumption that the well-known satire, as we have it, is spurious. Cf. Noeldeke (loc. cit.), pp. 155-150, and n. I on the latter.

A. adds another couplet hero as fellows :-

ازین در سخن چند رانم همی ' چو دریا کرانه ندانم همی '

No good can come of the son of a slave,
Even though his father hath ruled as King.
The King had no aptitude for good,
Else would he have seated me on a throne.
Since in his family there was no nobility
He could not bear to hear the names of the noble."

In truth good service was rendered to Mahmud by Shir-zad, and Mahmud was greatly indebted to him.

When I was at Nishapur in the year A.H. 514 (A.D. 1120-1121), I heard Amir Mu'izzi say that he had heard Amir 'Abdu'r-Razzaq at Tus relate as follows:—" Mahmud was once in India, and was returning thence towards Ghazna. On the way, as it chanced, there was a rebellious chief possessed of a strong fortress, and next day Mahmud encamped at the gates of it, and sent an ambassador to him, bidding him come before him on the morrow, do homage, pay his respects at the Court, receive a robe of honour and return to his place. Next day Mahmud rodo out with the Prime Minister on his right hand, for the ambassador had turned back and was coming to meet the king. 'I wender,' said the latter to the Minister, 'what answer he will have given?' The Minister replied:

'Should the answer come contrary to my wish,

Then for me the mace and the arena of [combat with]

Afrásiyáb.'

'Whose verse,' enquired Muhmud, 'is that? For he must have the beart of n man.' 'Poor Abu'l-Qasim Firdaws' composed it,' answered the Minister; 'he who laboured for five and twenty years to complete such n work, and reaped from it no advantage.' 'You speak well,' said Mahmud; 'I deeply regret that this noble man was disappointed by mo. Remind me at Ghazna to send him something.'

"So when the Sultan returned to Gbnzna, the Minister reminded him; and Mahmud ordered Firdawsi to be given sixty thousand dinars' worth of indige, end that this indige should be carried to Tus on the King's ewn camels, and that apelogies should be made to Firdawsi. For years the Minister had been working for this, and at longth he had achieved his work; so new he caused the camels to be loaded, and the indige arrived safely at Tabarán. 1 But as the camels were entering through the Rúdbar Gate, the corpse of Firdawsi was being borne forth from the Gate of Razán. Now at this time there was in Tubarán a preacher whose fagaticism was such that he declared that he would net suffer Firdawsi's body to be buried in the Musulman Cometery, becouse he was a Ráfidi; end nething that men could say served to move this doctor. New outside the gate there was a gorden belonging to Firdawsi, and there they buried him, and there he lies to this doy." And in the year A.H. 510 (A.D. 1116-1117) I visited his temb.3

They say that Firdewsi left a daughter, of very lofty spirit, to whom they would have given the King's gift; but she would not accept it, saying, "I need it not." The Post-master wrote to the Court and represented this to the King, who ordered that doctor to be expelled from Tabarán as a punishmeat for his efficiousness, and to be exiled from his home, and the mency to be given to the Imam Abú Bakr Ishaq for the repair of the rest-house of Chába, which stands on the read between Merv and Níshapúr on the boundaries of Tús. Whea this order reached Tús and Níshapúr, it was faithfully carried out; and the restoration of the rest-house of Chába was effected by this money.

¹ Tabarán is the name of a portion of the city of Tas. See B de Meynard's Diet. de la Perse, pp. 374-375.

^{*}Noeldeke (loo cit, p. 167, and n 2 ad ealc.) has Razzdq for Razda, but A., B., and L. all agree in the latter reading. There are several places called Radda, of which one situated near Tabaran is probably meant. See B de Meynard's Diet. de la Perse, p. 266. A Razda in Sistan is mentioned by Balddhuri (pp. 398-397), and another (Lil) in the district of Nasa in Khurasan. (Diet. de la Perse, p. 260.)

³ I am not sure at what point the inverted common should be inserted, but the last contours of this paragraph is certainly Nidhani's.

So B and L A, has Jaha.

Anecdote xxi.

At the period when I was in the service of that martyred prince the King of the Mountains (may God illuminate his tomb and exalt his station in Paradisal), that august personage had a high opinion of me, end showed himself a most generous patron towards me. Now on the Festival of the Breaking of the Fast one of the nobles of the city of Balkh (may God maintain its presperityl), Amír 'Amíd Ṣuliyya'd-Dín Ahú Bakr ' Muḥanmad b. al-Ḥusayu Rawánsháhí, came to the Court. Ha was a young man, an expert writer, a qualified Secretary of State, well endowed with culture and its fruits, popular with all, whose praises were on all tengues. And at this time I was not in attendance.

Now at a recoption the King chanced to say, "Call Nidhami." Said the Amir 'Amid Safivyu'd - Din, "Is Nidhami here?" They answered "Yes." But he supposed that it was Nidhami-i-Muniri.2 "Ah," said he, "a fine poet and a man of wide fume!" When the messenger arrived to eummon me, I put on my shoes, and, as I entered, did obeisanco, and eat down in my place. When the wine had gone round saveral times, Amír 'Amíd said, "Nidbami has not come." "He is come," replied tho King; "see, there he is, eeated in such-and-such a place." "I am not speaking of this Nidhaini," answered Amir 'Amid; "that Nidhami of whom I epeak is another one, end as for this one, I do not even know him." Thereupon I eaw that the King was vexed; he at once turned to me and said, "Is there another Nidhami bosides thee?" "Yes, sire," I answored, "there are two other Nidhamis, one of Samarquid, when they cull Nidhami-i-Munii, and one of Nishapur, whom they call Nidhami-i-Athiri; while me they call Nidbami-i-'Arudi." "Art thou better, or they?" demanded he. Then Amír 'Amíd percoived that he had spoken ill, and that the King was annoyed. "Sire," said he, "those two Nidhamis are quarrelsome follows, apt to break up social gatherings by their quarrelsomeness, and to cause trouble, and to de mischief." "Wait," said the King jestingly, "till you see this one drain a bumper and break up the meeting: but of these three Nidhamis which is the best poet?" "Of these two," said the Amir 'Amid, "I have personal knowledge, having seen them, while this one I have not proviously seen, nor have I heard his poetry. If he will compose a couple of verses on this subject which we have been discussing, so that I muy see his talents and hear his verse, I will tell you which of these three is best."

¹ L. adds 'ibn '

The reading of this meso is very doubtful in all three texts, both here and lower. In some it appears to read Alimbers.

Then the King turned to me, saying: "Now, O Nidhami, do not shame us: say what 'Amid desires."

Now at that time, when I was in the service of this King, I possessed a copicus talent and a brilliant genius, and the favours and gifts of my master had stimulated me to such a point that my imprevisations came fluent as running water; so I took up u pen, and, ere the wine-cup had gone twice round, composed these five couplets and submitted them to the King:—

در جهان سه نظامییم ای شاه ' که جهانی ز ما بافغانند ' من بورسا به پیش شخت شهم ' و آن دو در مّرّو پیش سلطانند ' بحقیقت که در سخن امروز ' هریکی مفخر خسراسانند ' گرچه همچون روان سخن گویند ' ورچه همچون خرد سخن دانند ' من شرایم که شان چو در یابم ' هردو از کار خود فسرو مانند '

. . که قدحي بخورد و مجلس را برهم زند ' L., which I follow, hos: ' . . . که قدحي بخورد که پنج قدح سنگی بخورد که پنج قدح سنگی بخورد که پنج قدح سنگی بخورد . . .

"We are three Nillhamis in the world, O King, on account of whom a whole world is filled with oulcry.

I am at Warsh before the King's throne, while those two others are in Mere before the Sultan.

To-day, in truth, in verse each one is the Pride of Khurásán.

Although they utter verse subtle as spirit, and although they understand the Art of Speech like Wisdom,

I am the Wine, for, when I get hold of them, both desixt from their work."

When I submitted those vorses, the Amír 'Amíd Ṣafiyyu'd-Dín bowed and said: "O King, let alone the Nidhámís, I know of no poet in all Transoxania, 'Iráq, or Khurásán capahlo of improvising five such vorses, more especially in respect of strength, energy, and sweetness, conjoined with such grace of diction and filled with ideas so original. Rejoice, O Nidhámi, for thou hast no peer on the face of the earth. O sire, he hath a graceful wit, a mind swift to apprehend, and a finished art. By the good fortune of the King of the age and his generosity he hath developed into a unique genius, and will even become more than this, for he is young and hath many days before him."

Thoreat the countenance of my King and Lord brightened mightily, and a great cheerfulness appeared in his gracious temperament, and he applauded me, saying: "I give thee the lead-mine of Warsá from this Festival until the Festival of the Sheep-sacrifice. Send an agent there." I did so, sending Isháq the Jew. It was the middle of summer, and while they were working it they melted much of the ore, so that in seventy days twelve thousand maunds of lead accrued to me, while the King's opinion of me was increased a thousand-fold. May God (blessed and exalted is He) illuminate his august ashes with the light of His approval, by His Favour and Grace!

ار آن خمس ' A., B. here add: ' سمخ آن.

و جان شريف اورا بجمه ع غنا مسرور -: كناد A. adds atter منه آلمغ

THIRD DISCOURSE.

On the Nature of the Lore of the Stars, and on the Expert Astrologer.

Abú Rayhan Birúní says in the first chapter of his "Explanation of the Science of Astrology" (Kitabu't-Tafhim fi sand'ati 't-tanjim'): "A man does not deserve the title of Astrologor until ho attains proficiency in four scioncos: first, Mathematics; secondly, Arithmetic; thirdly, Cosmography; and fourthly, Judicial Astrology."

Now Mathematical Science is that whoreby ore known the notures and qualities of lines and geometrical figures, plain and solid, and the general relotions of quantities, and what partakes of the quantitative nature, to what has position and form. It includes the principles of the Book of Euclid the geometrician in the resension of Thabit ibu Qurra.3

Arithmetic is that science whoreby ere known the netures of all sorts of numbers; the nature of their relation to one onother; their generation from each other; and tho applications theroof, such as halving, doubling, multiplication, division, addition, subtraction, and Algebra. The principles thereof are contained in the book of the 'Αριθμήτικη, and the applications in the "Supplement" (Takmila) of Abu Mangur of Baghdad,5 and the "Hundred Chapters" (Sad Bab) of as Sajzí.

¹ See Ricu's Persian Catalogue, pp. 451-2, where a MS. of the Persian version of this work, dated a.n. 685 (A.D. 1286), is described.

I suppose that this is the meaning of , in the text.

که تابت بی فرد دستی : I take this to be the sense of Late reading · دسبی . For رستی A. appears to read رستی and B. دسبی . Concerning Thabit b. Qurra, see Wustonfeld's Grack. d. Arabischen Aerzte, pp. 31-30. Br ukolmanu's Gesch. d. Arab. Letteratur, pp. 217, 218, etc. He was born in A.H. 221 (A.D. 830) and died A.H. 288 (A.D. 901).

[.] و خاصه هر نوعي از در نفس خويش ۸۰ ها ۹۸ م

Abú Man-or 'Ablu'l-Qábir b. Tábir al-Baghdádí, d. A.H. 429 (A.D. 1037).
 See Blújí Khalita, No. 3,253.
 Abú Sarid Abund b. Muhammad b. 'Abdu'l-Jalíl ac-Sajzí (or Sijazí, i.e of Sajistán or Sistán).
 See Brockelmann, op. cit., p. 219.

Cosmography is that science whereby are known the natures of the Celestial and Terrestrial Bodies, their shapes and positions, their relations to one another, and the measurements and distances which are between them, together with the nature of the movements of each one of the stars and heavens, and the co-ordination of the spheres, axes, and circles whereby these movements are fulfilled. It includes a knowledge of the Al-Magest and the best of its commentaries end clucidations, which are the Commentary of Tahrízí and the Al-Magest af Shifá. And amongst the epplications of this science is the science of the Calendar and of Almanaes.

Judicial Astrology is a branch of Natural Science, and its special use is pregnostication, by which is meant that deducing by unalogy from configurations, and from an estimation of the degrees and zodiacal signs and their influences, thase events which are brought about by their movements, in respect to the condition of the cycles of the world, politics, cities, nativities, changes, transitions, decisions, and other questions; and it is contained in these five [books] which we have enumerated, to wit, the writings of Ahú Ma'shar of Balkh, Ahmad 'Ahdu'l-Jalil-i-Sajzi, Abú Rayhán Bírúní, and Gúshyár-i-Jilí.

So the Astrologer must be a man of acute mind, approved character, and great netural iotelligeoce. And one of the essentials of this art is that the astrologer wha would pronounce prognosticatione should possess in his own horoscope the Share of the Unseen, and that the Lord of the House af this Share of the Unseen should be lucky, and in a favourable position, in order that such pronouncemeets as he gives may be near the truth. And one of the

For ماجزاء عالم "bodies") A., B. have all a "the nature of the constituent parts of the Colestial and Terrestial Reulins."

² See the long article on al-Majuti in Haji Khalifa (No. 11,413). The Tabrisi mtended is probably al-Fault b. Hatim of Tabris.

See Brockelmann, op. cit., pp. 221, 222.

⁴ See shid., pp. 222, 223. Both forms of the meson (Jili and Jahmli) are found in the texts.

conditions of being a good astrologer is that he should have in mind the whole of the "Principia" (Uşûl) of Gúshyár, and should continually study the "Opus Majus," and should look frequently into the Qánán-i-Mas'údi and the Jámi'-i-Sháhi, so that his knowledge and concepts may be refreshed.

Anecdote xxii.

Ya'qúb b. Isháq al-Kindí, though he was a Jew, was the philosopher of his age and the wisest man of his time, and stood high in the service of al-Ma'mún. One day he came in before al-Ma'mún, and sat down ubovo one of the Imáms of Islám. Said this man, "Thou art of a subject race; why, then, dost thou sit above the Imáms of Islám?" "Because," said Ya'qúb, "I know what thou knowest, while thou knowest not what I kaow."

Now this persoa knew of his skill in Astrology, but had no knowledge of his other attainments in science. "I will write dowa," said he, "something on a piece of paper, and if thou canst divine what I have written, I will admit your claim." Then they laid a wager, on the part of this person a cloak, and on the part of Ya'qúh a mule and its trappings, worth a thousand dínárs, which was standing at the door. Then the former asked for an inkstand and paper, wrote something on a piece of paper, placed it under the Caliph's quilt, and cried, "Out with it!" Ya'qúb b. Isháq asked for a tray of earth, rese up, took the altitude, ascertained the ascendant, drew an astrological table on the tray of earth, determined the positions of the stars, fixed the signs of the Zediae, worked out the subjective conditions and أو كار مهتر ببوسته مطالعه مى كند . From the context, some book

^{*} By Aha Rayhan al-Birani. See Hdji Khalife, No. 9,369.

⁸ See Wustenfeld's Gesch. d. Arab. Asizte, pp. 21, 22. He died about a. Il 260 (a.D. 873).

[.] تو مرد دمتی باشی 😘

This matter became generally known in Bagbdad, whonco it sprend to 'Iráq and throughout Khurásán, and was widely discussed. A cortain doctor of Balkh, prompted by that fanatical zeal which characterizes the learned, obtained a book on Astrology and placed a knife in the middle of it, intending to go to Baghdad, attend the lectures of Ya'qúb b. Isháq al-Kindí, mako a beginning in Astrology, and, when he should find a suitable opportunity, suddenly kill him. Stage by stage he advanced, until he went in to the hot bath and came out, arrayed himself in elem clothes, and, placing this book in his sleeve, set out for Ya'qúb's house.

When he renched the gnte of the house, he saw standing there many handsomely-caparisoned horses belonging to descendants of the Prophet³ and other eminent and noble persons of Baghdad. Having made enquiries, he went in, entered the circle in front of Ya'qúb, greeted him, and said, "I desire to study somewhat of the science of the stars with our Master." "Thou hast come from the East to slay me on a pretence of studying Astrology," replied Ya'qúb, "but thou wilt repeut of thine intention, study the stars, and ^{&#}x27; Neither the meaning nor the wording of this sentence is clear to me. I. has ' شرایط خبی و صمعر بعمل آورد.' . For خبی A. and B. have حبی or به به the reading being uncertain.

^{*} Some nort of garment seems to be meant, but neither the reading nor the meaning is clear. In his ' كنم', A., ' منو باقتابه كنم', B., ' دو باقتابه كنم'.

[&]quot; Literally, " of the Bant Hashim."

attain perfection in that soionce, and wilt become one of the groutest Astrologers in the Church of Mulammad (on whom he God's Blessing and Peace)." All the great men there assembled were astenished; and Abú Ma'shur' confessed and produced the knife from the middle of the book, broke it, and cast it away. Then he bent his kness and studied for fifteen years, until he reached that eminence which he reached in Astrology.

Anecdote xxiii.

It is stated that once when Sultán Mahmúd b. Náṣiru'd-Dín² was sitting on the roef of a four-doored summer-house in Ghazaa, in the Garden of a Thousand Trees, he turned his face to Abú Rayháa³ and said, "By which of those four doors shall I go out?" (for all four were practicable) "Decide, and write the decision on a piece of paper, and put it under my quilt." Abú Rayháa called for an astrolabe, took the altitude, worked out the ascendant, reflected for a while, and then wrote down his decision on a piece of paper, and placed it under the quilt. "Hast thou decided?" asked Mahmúd. He answered, "Yes."

Then Mahmud bade them make an opening in the wall, and they brought mattocks and spades, and in the wall which was on the eastern side dug out a fifth door, through which he went out. Then he bade them bring the paper. So they brought it, and on it was written: "He will go out through none of these four doors, but they will dig a fifth door on the side of the eastern wall, by which door he will go forth." Mahmud, on reading this, was furious, and hade them cast Abu Rayhan down from the midst of the palace. So they did even as he had said. Now

3 i.e. the celebrated al-Birani, of whom mention has been already made.

See Brockelmann's Gesch. d. Asab. Litteratur, pp. 221, 222.
 i.a. the great Saltin Mahmad of Ghazna (reigned A.H. 388-421, A.D. 998-1030).

a not had been stretched here to keep off the flies,1 and en it Abú Rayhán fell. The net tore, and he subsided gontly to the ground, so that he received no injury. "Bring him in," said Mahmud. So they brought him in, and Mahmud said: "O Abú Rayhan, didst thou know this?" "I know it, sire," he answered, and, taking the Almmae from the servant, produced the prognestications out of the Almanac;2 and amongst the predictions for that day was written: "To-day they will east me down from a high place, but I shall reach the earth in safety, and arise sound in body."

All this was not according to Mahmud's mind. He waxed still angrisr, and ordered Abú Rayhan to be detained in the oitadel. So Abu Rayhan was confined in the citadel of Ghazaa, where he remained for six months. It is said that during that period of six menths nons dared speak to Mahmud about Abu Ruyhan, one of whose servants was, however, deputed to wait upon him, and to go out to get what he wanted, and to return therewith. One day this servant was passing through the Park of Ghazna, when a fortune-teller called to him and said, "I perceive several things worth mentioning in your fortune: give me a present, that I may revoal them to you." The servant gave him two dirhams, whorsupen the soothsayer said: "One dear to thee is in afflictica, but ero three days are past he will be delivered from that affliction, will be invosted with a robs of honour, and will again be loaded with honours and favours."

The servant processed to the citadel, and told this incident to his master as a piece of good tidings. Abú

بسر مرغزار غزنبن . . ٥

¹ This seems to be the meaning of Le's reading: مگر واق مگسرا داسی المنته بوكال. A. and B. are illegible. The former seems to have, مگر تا سام سانکش را ,tho latter و مگر با شام منانکس را دامی . .

و المحدويل از ميان تقويم بيرون كرد ' ع

Rayhan smiled and said, "O foolish fellow, dost thou not know that on such occasions one ought not to stand still? Thou hast informed me too lute." It is said that the Primo Minister Ahund Husan of Maymand (may God be merciful to him !) was for six months seeking an opportunity to say a word on bohalf of Abu Rayhan. At longth, when engaged in the chase, he found the King in a good humour, and, working from one topic to another, he brought the conversation round to Astrology. Then he said: "Poor Abú Raylian uttered two such good prognostications, and instead of decorations and a robe of honour obtained bonds and imprisonment" "Know, my lord," replied Mahmud, "for I have proved it," that this man is said to have no equal in the world save Abú 'Ali Síná (Avicenna), but both his prognostications were opposed to my will; and kings are like little children 3-in order to receive rewards from them, one should speak in accordance with their opinion. It would have been better for him on that day if one of those two progaestications had been wrong. But to-morrow order him to be brought forth, and to be given a horse caparisoned with gold, a royal robe, a satin turhan, a thousand dinárs, a slave, and a handmaiden."

So, on the very day specified by the scothsayer, they brought forth Abú Rayhán, and the gift of honour detailed above was conferred upon him, and the King apologized to him, saying: "If then desirest always to reap advantage from me, speak according to my desire, not according to the dictates of thy science." So thereafter Ahú Rayhán altered his practice; and this is one of the conditions of the service of kings, that one must be with them in right or wrong, and speak according to their wish.

Now when Abú Rayhan reached his house, the learned

Instead of this seatence A. has: "Thou hast wasted two dirhams."

I tollow L., which roads: ' نحواجه و من یافته ام '
 خواجه بدان که من ندانسته ام '

³ A. omits this simile.

came to congratulate him. He related to them the incident of the soothsayer, whereat they were namzed, and sent to summen him. They found him most illiterate, knowing nothing. Then Abú Rayhán said, "Hast theu the herescope of thy nativity?" "I have," replied he. Then Abú Rayhán examined it, and the Share of the Unseed fell directly on the degree of hie Ascendant, so that whatever he said, though he spoke blindly, came oear to the truth.

Anecdote xxiv.

I had in my omployment a woman-servant, who was horn on the 28th of Safar, A.H. 510² (=July 12th, A.D. 1116), when the Moon was in conjunction with the Sun and there was no distance between them, so that both the Share of Fortune and the Share of the Unseen fell on the degree of the Ascendant. When she reached the age of fifteen years, I taught her Astrology, in which she because so skilful that she could answer difficult questione in this science, and her prognostications came very near the truth. Ladies used to come to her and question her, and the most part of what she said coincided with the pre-ordained decrees of fate.

One day an old woman came and said: "It is now four years since a sen of mine west on a journey, and I have no news of him, neither of his life nor of his death. See whother, wherever he may be, he is of the living or the dead." So the woman-astrologer arose, took the altitude, worked out the degree of the Ascendant, drow out an astrological table, and determined the positions of the etars; and the very first words she said were, "Thy sen hath returned!"

The old woman was annoyed and snid: "O child, I have no hopes of my son's coming: tell mo this much, is ho alive or dead?"

سهم الغيبش برحاق درجه طالع افتاده بود . . الهم الغيبش برحاق درجه طالع افتاده ود . . ا

"I tell you," said the other, "thy son hath come. Go, and, if he hath not come, return, that I may tell thee how he is."

So the old woman wont to hor house, and lol her son had arrived and was unleading his asses. She ombraced him, took off her veil, and came back to the woman-astrologer, saying, "Then didst speak truly; my son hath come, bringing presents"; nud she gave her her blessing. When I came home and heard tidings of this, I ouquired of her, "By what didst them speak, and from what House didst them deduce this prognostication?" She answered: "I had not reached so far as this. When I had finished the figure of the Ascendant, he came in and sat down on the letter of the degree of the Ascendant, wherefore it so seemed in my mind, that this young man had returned. When I said so, and the mother had gone to find out, it hecame so certain to me that it was as though I actually saw him unleading his asses."

Then I perceived that it was the Share of the Unseen, and nothing else but this, which thus influenced the degree of the Ascendant.

Anecdote xxv.

Mahmúd Dá'údí, the son of Abu'l-Qásim Dá'údí, wss a great fool, nay, almost a madman, and had no considerable knowledge as to the actions of the stars; yet he could cast a nativity, and in his notehook were figures declaring "it is" or "it is not." He was in the service of Amír Dá'úd Abú Bakr Mas'úd at Panj-dih; and his prognostications gonerally came right.

Now his madness was such that when my master the King of the Mountains sent him a pair of Ghúrí dogs, very large and formidable, he fought with them of his own free-will, and escaped from them in safety. Years afterwards we were sitting with a number of persons of learning in the Perfumers' Market at Herát, in the shop of Muqri the surgeon-druggist, and discussing all manner of subjects. One of these learned men happening to romark, "What a great man was Avicenna (Ibn Siuá)!" I saw Dá'údí fly into a passion, all the possession of anger appearing in and overcoming him, and he cried: "O so-and-so, who was Abú 'Alí? I rogard myself as equal in worth to a thousand Abú 'Alí's, for he never even fought with a cat, whilst I fought before Amír Dá'úd with two dogs." So on that day I knew him to be mad; yet for all his madness I witnessed the following occurrence.

In the year A.H. 505² (AH. 1111-1112), when Sultan Sanjar encamped in the Plain of Khúzán,³ on his way to Transoxania to fight with Muhammad,⁴ Amír Dá'úd attached himself to the King, and made a great entertainment for him. On the third day the King came to the river-brink, and entered a boat to amuse himself with fishing. In the boat he summoned Dá'údí before him to talk after the manaer of madmen, while he laughed, for Dá'údí would openly abuse Amír Dá'úd.

Presently the King said to him, "Prognosticate how many manuals the fish which I shall catch this time will weigh." Dâ'údí said, "Draw np your hook." So the king drew it up; and be took the altitude, paused for a while, and then said, "Now cast it." The King cast, and he said, "I prognosticate that this fish which you will draw out will weigh five maunds." "O knave," said Amir Dâ'úd, "whence should fish of five maunds' weight come into this stream?" "Bo silent," said Dâ'údi; "what do you know about it?" So Amir Dâ'úd was silent, fearing that, should he insist further, he would only get abuse

³ A. has 508.

See Barbier de Meynard's Inet. de la Peru, pp. 216, 216. A. teals Khde, B. Khdei.

Apparently his brother, Ghiyashu'd-Din Aba Shuja Muhammad the Seljaq is meant. He reigued A. ir. 498-511 (A.D. 1104-1117).

Suddenly there was a pull on the line, indicating that a fish had been taken captive. The King drow in the line with a vory large fish on it, which, whou weighed, scaled five 1 maunds. All were amazed, and expressed their astenishment. "Dá'údi," said the King, "what dost thou wish for?" "O King," said ho with an obeisance, "of all that is on this earth I desire but a cont of mail, a shield, and a spear, that I may do battle with Bawardi." this Ahawardi was the Captaia of Amir Dá'úd's guto, und Dá'údí entertained towards him a fanatical hatrod, because the title of Shujá'u'l-Mulk had been conferred upon him, while Dá'údí himself bore the title of Shujá'u'l-Hukamá, and gradged that the other should be so entitled. And the Amír, woll knowing this, used continually to embroil Dá'údí with him, and this good Musulman was at his wits' oad hy reason of him.

In short, as to Mahmud Da'udi's madness there was no doubt, and I have mentioned this matter in order that the King may know that folly and insanity are amongst the conditions of this craft.

Anecdote xxvi.

Hakim-i-Mawşili was one of the order of Astrologers in Nishāpūr, and was in the service of that great Mioister Nidhāmu'l-Mulk of Tūs, who used to consult with bim on matters of importance, and seek his advice and opinioa. Now when Mawsili's years were drawing to a close, and great deorepitude appeared in him, and feehleness of hody began to show itself, so that he was no longer ahlo to perform these long journeys, he asked the Minister's permission to go and reside at Nishāpūr, and to send thence annually the almanae and forecast for the year.

Now the Minister Nidhamu'l-Mulk was also in the decline of life and near the term of oxistence; and he said: "Look so much at the lapse of my life as to observe when the dissolution of my elomoutal nature will occur, and at what epoch that inevitable fate and unavoidable sontence will befal."

Hakim-i-Mawsili answored, "Six months after my death." So the Minister ordered him to receive all things needful for his comfort, and Mawsili went to Nishapur, and there abode in ease, sending each year the forecast oud calendar. And whoever came to the Minister from Nishapur, he used first to enquire, "How is Mawsili?" And so soon as he had news of his safety, he would become joyous and cheerful.

At length, in the year A.H. 485 (= A.D. 1092-3), one arrived from Nishapur, and the Minister enquired of him concerning Mawsili. The man replied, with an obeisance: "May he who heldeth the chief sent in al-Islam be the beir of many lifetimes! Mawsili hath quitted this mortal hody." "When?" enquired the Minister. "In the middle of Rahi the First" (April 11-May 11, A.D. 1092), answered the man, "he yielded up his life for him who sitteth in the chief seat of al-Islam."

The Minister thereat was mightily put about, and was warned, and looked into all his affairs, and confirmed all his pious endowments, and gave effect to his hequests, and wrote his last testament, and set free such of his elaves as had earned his approval, and discharged the debts which he owed, and, so far as loy in his power, made all men content with him, and sought forgiveness from his adversaries, and made his will, and so sat awaiting his fate until the moeth of Ramadán (A.H. 485=Oct. 5-Nov. 4, A.D. 1092), when he fell a martyr at the hands of that Sect (i.e. the Assassins); may God make illustrious his Proof, and accord him an ample Approval!

Since the Ascendant ruling his nativity, the observation, the Lord of the Sign, and the dominant factor were rightly

ا درارات را (اوزار را ۱۰) نوقبع کرد ، A., which I follow, has determined, and the Astrologor was expert and accomplished, naturally the prognostication came true.1

Anecdote xxvii.

In the year A.H. 506 (A.D. 1112-1113) Khwaja Imam 'Umar Khayyam' and Khwaja Imam Mudhaffar-i-Isfizari had alighted in the city of Balkh, in the street of the Slave-sellers, in the house of Amír Aba Sa'd, and I had joined that assembly. In the midst of our convivial gathering I heard that Argument of Truth (Ḥujjatu't-Ḥaqq) 'Umar say, "My grave will be in a spot where the trees will shed their blossoms on me twice in each year." This thing seemed to me impossible, though I knew that one such as he would not speak idle words.

When I arrived at Níshápúr in the year A.H. 530 (A.D. 1135-6), it being then some years since that great man had veiled his countenance in the dust, and this lower world had been berenved of him, I went to visit his grave on the eve of a Friday (seeing that he had the claim of a master on me), taking with me a guide to point out to me his tomb. So he brought me out to the Ilira Cometery; I turned to the left, and his tomb lay at the foot of a garden-wall, over which pear-trees and peach-trees thrust their heads, and on his grave had fallen so many flewer-leaves that his dust was hidden beneath the flowers. Then I remembered that saying which I had heard from him

¹ I confess that these astrological terms are beyond ms. Soveral of them (e.g. haylig and kadkhuda) are explained in the section of the Mafdtihu'l-'ulium which treats of Astrology (ed. Van Vloten, pp. 225-232). The first part of the sentence runs:

چون طالع مولود و رصد و کدخدا و هیالج درست بود . . .

A. and B. have Khayydmi, the form usually found in Arabia books.

[،] بو سعيد حرّه A. adds جرّه , while B. calls him .

So A., B., and L., but in the margin of the latter is the following gloss:
حيرت حيو ميرى ايوان وطاق و رواق (برهان)

in the city of Balkh, and I fell to weeping, because on the fuee of the earth, and in all the regions of the habitable globe, I nowhere saw one like unto him. May God (blessed and exalted is He) have merey upon him, by His Grace and His Favour! Yet although I witnessed this prognostication on the part of that Proof of the Truth 'Umar, I did not observe that he had any great belief in astrological predictions; nor have I seen or heard of any of the great [scientists] who had such belief.²

Anecdote xxviii.

In the winter of the year A.H. 508 (= A.D. 1114-1115) the King sent a messenger to Merv to the Prime Minister Sadru'd-Din Muhammad b. al-Mudhaffar (on whom be God's Mercy) bidding him tell Khwaja Imam 'Umar to select a favourable time for him to go hunting, such that therein should be no snowy or rainy days. For Khwaja Imam 'Umnr was in the Minister's company, and used to lodge at his house.

So the Minister sent a messenger to summen bim, and told him what had happened. The Khwaja went and looked into the matter for two days, and made a careful choice; and he himself went and superintended the mounting of the King at the auspicious moment. When the King was mounted and had gone but a short distance, the sky became overcast with clouds, a wind arose, and snow and mist supervened. All present fell to laughing, and the King desired to turn back; but Khwaja Imam ['Umor] said: "Have no anxiety, for this very hour the clouds will clear eway, and during these five days there will be not a drop of moisture." So the King rode on, and the clouds

¹ A. has: "cause him to dwell in Paradise."

² L. omits this last sentence.

و یک بانگ زمین: I suppose this to be the meaning of the words: ویک بانگ زمین opened, and during those five days there was ac moisture, and no one saw a cloud.

But prognostication by the stors, though a recognized art, is not to he relied on, and whatever the astrologer predicts he must leave to Fate.

Anecdote xxix.

It is incumbent on the King, wherever he goos, to provo such companions and servants es he has with him; and if one is a believer in the Holy Law, and scrupulously observes the rites and duties thereof, he should make him an intimate, and treat him with honour, and confide in him; but if otherwise, he should drive him away, and guard even the outskirts of his environment from his very shadow. Whoover does not believe in the religion and law of Muhammad the Chosen One, in him can no man trust, and he is unlucky, both to himself and to hie master.

In the beginning of the reign of the king Saltán Ghiyathu'd - Dunya wa'd - Din Muhammad b. Malikshah, styled Qasimu Amiri'l-Muminin (may God illuminate his proof!),1 the King of the Arabs, Sadaqa,2 revolted and withdrew his neck from the voke of allegiance, and with fifty thousand Arab horsemon marched on Baghdad from The Princo of Believers al-Mustadhbir bi'llah had sent off letter efter letter and courier after courier to Islehan,3 summoning the Sultan, who sought from the estrologers the determination of the auspicious moment. But no such determination could be made which would suit the Lord of the King's Ascendant, which was retrograde. So they said, "Wo find no euspicious moment." "Seek it, then," said he; and he was vory urgent in the matter, and much vexed in mind. And so the astrologers fled.

Roigned A.ir. 498-511, A.D. 1104-1117.
 Cf. Houtsma's ed. of al-Bundari's History of the Solyage, p. 185, where an Amir of this name is mentioned under the year A.ir. 531.

A. calls it Sepahdn.

Now there was a stranger of Jayy who had a shop by the Gate of the Domo and who used to take omens; and men and women of every class used to visit him, and he used to write for them amulets and charms, but he had no prefound knowledge. By means of an acquaintance with one of the King's servants he brought himself to the King's notice, and said: "I will find an auspicious moment: depart in that, and if then dost not return victorious, then cut off my head."

So the King was pleased, and mounted his horse at the moment doclared auspicious by him, and gave him two hundred dinárs of Nishapur, and went forth, fought with Sadaqa, defeated his army, took him captive, and put him to death. And when he returned triumphant and victorious to Isfahan, he heaped favours on the soothsayer, ordered him to receive great honours, and made him one of his Thou he summoned the astrologers and said: intimatos. "You did not find an auspicious moment, it was this stranger of Jayy who found it; and I wont, and God justified the omen.2 Probably Sadaqa had sont you a bribo so that you should not name the auspicious time." Then they all fell to the earth, lamenting and exclaiming: "The astrologers were not satisfied with that moment. If you wish, write a messago and send it to Khurásán, and seo what Khwaja Imam 'Umar Khayyam says."

The King saw that the poor wretches did not speak amiss. He therefore summoned one of his courtiers and said: "Invite this stranger of Jayy to your house, drink wine with him, and treat him with kindly familiarity; and, when he is overcome with wine, onquire of him, saying,

A suburb of Islahan, as is explained in a marginal gloss in I., which has this reading: غريب خبى (printed in the text as one word, عريبجي).

A. reads غزنوى and B. غربوى.

¹ A. adds " Wherefore did ye act thus?"

L is constant in this reading, but here A. has أبحيرا and B.

'Was that moment determined by thoo not good? For the astrologors find fault with it. Tell me the secret of this.'"

Then the courtier did so, end, when his guest was drunk, made this enquiry of him. The southsayer answered: "I knew that one of two things must happen; either that ermy would be defeated, or this one. If the fermer, then I should be leaded with honours; and if the latter, how should the King concern himself with me?"

Next day the countier reported this conversation to the King, who ordered the strange soothshyer to be expelled, because one who held such views about good Musulmans was unlucky. Then I the King summened his own astrologers and restored his confidence to them, saying: "I knew that this soothsayer never said his prayers, and one who ogrees not with our Holy Law ogrees not with us."

Anecdote xxx.

Iu the year A.H. 547 (A.D. 1152-3) a battle wes fought between that king of blessed memory Sanjar b. Malikshah and my lord the king 'Ala'u'd-Din wa'd-Dunya; and the army of Ghur was defeated, and my lord the King of the East was taken prisoner, and my lord's son the Just King Shamsu'd-Dawla wa'd-Din Mahmud b. Mas'ud was taken captive at the hands of the Commander-in-chief (Amir-i-sipalisalar). The runsom was fixed at fifty thousand dinars of pure gold, and a messenger from him was to go to the Court of Bamiyan to osk for this sum; and when it should be sent the Prince was to be released, while the King himself was granted his liberty by the Lord of the World (Sanjor), who, moreover, at the time of his departure from are omitted in Is. For this meaning of هريوه see Valler's Persian Laxicon, s.v.

A. adds "they killed him, and"

Herat, granted him a robe of honour; and it was under these circumstances that I urrived to wait upon him.

One day, being extremely sad at beart, he signed to me, und enquired when this deliverance would family be accomplished, and whon this consignment would arrive. I took an observation that day with a view to making this prognostication, and worked out the ascendant, exerting myself to the utmost, and [ascertained that] there was au indication of a satisfactory solution to the question on the third day. So next day I came and said: "To-morrow at the time of the first prayer the messenger will arrive." All that night the Prince was thinking about this mutter. Next day I hastened to wait on him. "To-day," said he, "is the time fixed." "Yes," I replied; and continued with him till the first prayer. When the call to prayer was sounded, he remarked reproachfully: "The first prayer has arrived, but still no news!" Even while he was thus speaking, a courier arrived bringing the good tidings that the coasignment had come, consisting of fifty thousand dinars, sheep, and other things, and that 'Izzu'd-Dia Mahmud,2 the steward of Prince Husamu'd-Dawla wa'd-Din, was in charge of the convoy. My lord Shamen'd- . Dawla wa'd-Din was invested with the King's dress of honour, and very shortly regained his heloved home, and from that time his affairs bave prespered more and more every day (may they continue so to de!). And thence it was that he used to treat me with the utmost kindness and say: "Nidhamí, do you remember making such a prognostication in Herat, and how it came true? I wanted to fill thy mouth with gold, but there I had no gold, though here

واز جانب [جوانب] : The text is rather obscure here. It runs: [جوانب] سلطان عالم او خود مطلق بود بوقت حرکت کردن از هرات تشریف [نامزد] کرده بود و من بنده درین حال بخدمت رسیدم '

[.] حا جي ∆. adda _ جا

I have." Then he called for gold, and filled my mouth therewith till it would contain no more, whereupon he said, "Hold out thy sleeve." So I hold it out, and he filled it else with gold. Moy God (blessed and exolted is Ile) mointain this dynasty in duily-increasing prosperity, and long spore those two Princes to my ougust Master, by Ilis favour, bounty, and grace! Amen, O Lord of the Worlds!

FOURTH DISCOURSE.

On the Nature of the Science of Medicine, and the grades 1 of Physicians.

Medicine is that art whereby the health of the human body is preserved; whereby, when it wanes, it is restored; and whoreby the body is embellished by long bair, o clean complexion, freshuess and vigour.

Excursus.

The physician should be of tender disposition, of wise ond gentle nature, and more especially an acute observer, capeble of benefiting everyone by occurate disquesses, that is to say, by rapid doduction of the unknown from the koown. And no physician can be of tender disposition if he fails to recognize the nobility of man; nor of philosophical nature unless he knows Logic, nor on ocute observer unless he'be strengthened by God's guidance; and he who is not an acute observer will not arrive at a correct understanding of the cause of ony ailment, for he must form his opinion from the pulse, which has a systole, o diastole, and a peuse between these two movements.

Now here there is a difference of opinion emongst physicians, one school mointaining that it is impossible by pulpotion to gauge the inevenent of contraction; but

. هدایهٔ A bas مرابب For that most accomplished of the moderns, that talented man Abú 'Alí al-Husayn b. 'Abdu'lláh Síná (Avicenna),1 says in his book the Qunun that the movement of contraction also can be ganged, though with difficulty, in thin subjects;3 and that the pulse is of two sorte, each of which is divided into three subordinate varieties, namely, its two extremes and its meau; but, unless the Divine guidanco assist the physician in his search for the truth, his thought will not hit the mark. So also the examination of the urine, and the observing of its colour and peculiarities, and the deducing somewhat from each colour, is no easy matter; for these deductions are dependent on Divine help and Heavenly guidance; and this is the quality which we have already mentioned under the name of acumon. And unless the physician knews Logic, and understands the meaning of species and genus, he cannot discriminate between that which apportains to the category and that which is peculiar to the individual, and so will not recognize the cause of the disease. And, failing to recognize the cause, he will not succeed in his treatment. But lot us now give an illustration, so that it may be known that it is as we say. Discase³ is the genue; fever, cold, headache, dizziness, scarlet fever, and jauadice are the apecies, each of which is distinguished from the others by a diagnostic sign, while each itself is again divisible into varieties. For instance, 'Feyer' is the genus, wherein quotidian, tertian, double tertian, quartan, and the sub-varieties of each, are distinguished from each other by a special diagnostic sign, so that, for instance, quotidian is distinguished from other

See De Slaue's translation of 15n Khallikdu, vol. 1, pp. 440-446; von Kremer's Culturgeschichte d. Urients, vol. ii, pp. 455, 466; Wusterfeld's Gewh. d. Arab Aerste, pp. 64-75, etc. The Qdnun was printed at Rome, A.D. 1693.

A. reads :

حرکت انفیاض را در توان یافت بدشواری اندر تنها می گوشت ک This is no doubt the correct reading, not گوشت as in B and L.

¹ L. here has معنس جنس آمد instead of the correct reading of A.,
. . مرع .

fevers by the fact that the longest period thereof is a day and a night, and that in it there is no rigor, heaviness, lassitude, nor pain.\(^1\) Again, inflummatory fover\(^2\) is distinguished from other fevers by this, that when it lays hold of anyone it does not abute for several days; while tertian is distinguished by the fact that it comes one day and not the next; and double tertian by this, that one day it comes with a higher temperature and a shorter interval, and another day in a milder form with a longer interval; while, lastly, quartan is distinguished by this, that for two days it does not come and the third day it comes.

Each of these, again, comprises ecveral varieties, and each of these in turn sundry sub-varieties; and if the physician be versed in Logic and possessed of acumen, he will know which fover it is, what the materies marbi is, and whether it is simple or compound, and he can then at once proceed to treat it; but if he fail to recognize the disease, then let him turn to God and seek help from Him; and so likewise, if he fail in his treatment, let him have recourse to God, seeing that the issue is in His bands.

Anecdote xxxi.

In the year A.H. 512,3 in the Druggists' Bazaar of Níshápúr, at the shop of Mahammad Dukhin the Physician,4 I heard Khwája Imám Abú Bakr Daqqáq saying: "A certain man of Níshápúr was soized with the colio and called me in. I examined him, and proceeded to treat him,

[.] و درو تکسّر و گرانی و کاهلی و درد نباشد ' ۱

علقة على . See Schlimmer's Terminologie Médico - Pharmaceutique (lithographed at Tihran, A.H. 1874), pp. 192-197 and 286. Perhaps, however, it should here be translated "remittent."

³ A. has A.M. 502 (= A.D. 1108-9).

The readings vary. A. has محمد عمد ; B. محمد عمد ; L. مخمه و محمد الله عمد عمد الله عمد الله

⁴ A. adds "in the year [A.Tr.] 502."

fulfilling the utmest of my endcavour in this matter; but ne improvement in his health took place. Three days elapsed. At the time of evening prayer I returned, thinking that the patient would pass away at midnight. I went up on to the roof, but could hardly sleep for anxiety. In the morning when I awoke I said to myself, 'The patient will have passed away.' I turned my face in that direction, but heard ne sound [of lamentation] which might indicate his passing. I repeated the Fátiha, and hastoued in that direction, saying: 'O my Ged and my Lord, Theu Thyself hast said in the Sure Book and Indubitable Scripture, "And we send down in the Qui'an what is a Healing and a Mercy to true believers." ' For I was filled with regret, seeing that ho was a young man, and in easy circumstances. I perfermed the miner ablution, went to the oratory, end repeated the customary prayer. One knocked at the door of the bouse. When I went to look who was there, it was one of his household, who gave good tidings, saying, 'He hath passed out of danger'; end, on my enquiring when, added, 'Just now he obtained relief.' Then I know that the patient had been relieved by the blessing of the Fatiha of the Scripture, and that this draught had been dispensed from the Divine Dispensary. For I have put this to the proof, administering this draught in many cases, in all of which it proved beneficial, end resulted in restoration to health."

Therefore the physician should be ef good faith, and should venerate the commands and prehibitions of the Holy Law. And en the science of Medicine he should read the "Apherisms" (Fusul) of Hippocrates, the "Questions" (Masá'il) of Hunaya b. Isháq,2 the "Guide" (Murshul) of Muhammod b. Zakariyyá of Ray (ar-Rází),3 and Níli's "Commontary"; and after he has read and learned these

¹ Qur'an, xvi., 84.

² See Wuatenield's Geschichte d. Arab. Acrite, No. 69, pp. 26-29. He was born a.n. 194 (a.D. 800), and died a.n. 260 (a.D. 873).

⁶ Ibid., No. 98, pp. 40-49. He is known in Europe as Rasis or Rhoses.

[.] شرع نیلی ۸، han شرب نبلی ۴۵۲

volumes above enumerated with a kind and careful master. he should diligently study with a congenial teacher the following intermediate works, to wit, the "Thesaurus" (Dhakhira) of Thabit b. Qurra, the Mansari 1 of Muhammud b. Zakariyya of Ray, the "Direction" (Hidaya) of the younger 2 Abn Bakr, or the "Sufficiency" (Kifaya) of Ahmad Farrukh, or the "Aime" (Aghrad) of Sayvid Isma'il Jurjáni.3 Then he should take up one of the more detailed treatises, such as the "Sixteen (Treatises," Sitta 'ashar) of Galon, or the "Compondium" (Havet) of Muhammad h. Zakariyya, or the "Complete Practitioner" (Kamilu's-Sana'at), or the " Hundred Chapters" (Sud Bab) of Abu Sahl Musihi,4 or the Qualun of Ahu 'Ali (Avicenna),5 or the Dhakhtra-i-Khuarazmahaht,6 and read it in his leisure moments; or, if he desires to be independent of other works. he may content himself with the Quintin.

The Lord of the Two Worlds and the Guide of the Two Grosser Races says: "Every kind of game is in the belly of the wild ass." All this has been set forth by the Qunun, so that much may be effected therewith; and whoever has mastered the first volume of the Qunun, to him nothing will be hidden of the general principles and applications of Medicine, for if Hippocrates and Galen could return to life, it would be proper that they should de reverence to this book. Yet have I heard a wonderful thing, to wit, that one hath taken exception to Ahú 'Alí in respect of this work,

ا See Wüstenfeld, op. cit., p. 43, No. 2. The full title of the work is: فتاب الطب المنصوري

¹ Or "later" (آخرین), but A. reads اخوین. I cannot identify this person.

² See Wüstenseld, op cit., No. 105, p. 95.

Aviceuna's master, d. A.H. 390 (A.D. 1000). See Wüstenfeld, loc. cit., pp. 59, 60, No. 118.

See n. 1 on p. 107 supra.

See Rieu's Pernan Catalogue, pp. 466, 467.

² Meaning that every kind of game is inferior to the wild ass. It is eaid proverbially of anyone who excels his fellows. See Lane's Arabis Lerseon, p. 2367, s.v. . i.i.

and hath embodied his objections in a book, which he hath named "the Rectification of the Qanun"; and it is as though I looked at both books, and porceived what a distinguished man the author of the first was, while the author of the second merits only consure. For what right has anyone to find fault with eo great a man, when the very first question which he moots with in a book of his which he comes across is difficult to his comprehension? For four thousand years the physicians of antiquity travailed in spirit and melted their vory soule in order to reduce the science of Medicine to some fixed order, yet could not effect this, until, after the lapse of this period, that absolute philosopher and most mighty thinker Aristotle portioned and parcelled out Logic and Philosophy as in a balance, and measured them by the measure of analogy, so that all doubt and ambiguity departed from them, and they were established on a sure and critical basis. And during those fifteen centuries which have elapsed since his time, no philosopher has won to the inmost ossence of his doctrine, nor travolled the high road of his pre-eminence, save that most excollent of the moderns, the Philosophor of the East and the West, the Proof of Islam, Aha 'Ali b. 'Ahdu'llah b. Sias (Aviceana). He who finde fault with these two great men will have oust himself out from the company of the wise, ranked himself with madmea, and proved himself to be of the namber of those who lack intelligence. May God (blessed and exalted is He) keep us from such stumblings and vaio imaginings!

So, if the physician hath mastered the first volume of the Qánán, and hath attained to forty years of age, he will be worthy of confidence; and when he hath reached this degree, he should keep ever with him some of the smaller treatises composed hy provod masters, such as the "Gift of Kings" (Tuh fatu't-Muluk) of Mahammad Zakuriyyá [ur-Rází], or tho Kifuya of Ibn Sandino of Isfalian, or the "Provision ogainst oll sorts of error in Medical Treatment" (Tudaruku anwa'i'l-khatú fl't-tadbiri't-tibbi), of which Ahú 'Alí (Avicenna) is the author; or the Khafiyyu'l-'A/o'i,1 or the "Memoranda" (Yadigar) of Sayyid Isma'il Jurjani. For no reliance can be placed on the Memory, which is located in the posterior part of the brain, for it may dolay to afford him ossistance in carrying out these prescriptions.

[.] اصلاح قانوں ا

^{*} L. has ' مرّه و A. enbatitutes . For مرّه و نقد كرد A. enbatitutes . حدود .

³ A. has " the Proof of God unto His creatures."

Therefore every king who would choose a physician must see that these conditions which have been enumerated ore found in him; for it is no light motter to commit one's life and soul into the hands of any ignorant quack, or to entrust the care of one's health to any reckless charlaton.

Anecdote xxxii.

Bukht-Yíshú',3 a Christian of Baghdad, was a skilful physician and a true and tondor man; and he was attached to the service of al-Ma'min the Caliph. Now one of the children of Hashim, a kinsman of al-Mo'mun, was ottacked with dysentery, and ol-Ma'mun, being greatly ottached to him, sont Bukht-Yishu' to treat him. So he, for al-Ma'mun's sake, girded up his loins in service, aud treated him in various ways, but to no purpose, for the case passed beyond his powers. So Bukht-Yishu' was ashamed before él-Ma'mun; but al-Me'mun said to him: "Be not oshamed, for thou didst fulfil thine utmost endeavour, hut God Almighty doth not desire that it should succeed. Acquiesce in Fate, even as we have acquiesced." Bukht - Yishu', seeiog al-Ma'múo thus hopelese, replied: "Ouc other remedy remains, and it is a perilous oce; but, trusting to the fortune of the Prince of Believers, I will attempt it, and perchance God Most High may cause it to succeed."

¹ See Haji Khallfa, No. 4,738.

See Wustenfeld, op. cit., p. 95, No. 105. Ho died A.H. 530.
 See Wustenfeld, op. cit., p. 17, No. 30. Concerning this and similar names, see Noeldeke's Goodishts d. Artukhshir-i-Papakan, p. 49, n. 4.

Now the patient was going to steel fifty or sixty times a day. So Bukht - Yishu' prepared u purgative and administered it to him; and on the day whereon he took the purgative, his diarrhoa was still further increased; but next day it stopped. So the physicians asked him, "What bazardens treatment was that which thou didst adopt vesterday?" Ho answered: "The materies morbs of this diarrhoa was from the brain, and until it was disledged from the brain the flux would not cease. I feared that if I udministered a purgative the patient's etrength might not be equal to the increased diarrhoa; but at length, when I plucked up heart, [I saw that] there was hope in giving the purgative, but nece in withhelding it. So I gave it, and God Meet High vouchsafed a cure; and my epitnen was justified, numely, that if the purgative were withheld, only the death of the patient was to be expected; but that if it were administered, there was a possibility of either life er death. Therefore, seeing that to give the purgative was the better course, I administered it."

Aneedote xxxiii.

The great Shaykh Abú 'Alí Síná (Avicenus) relates as fellows in the "Book of the Origin and the Return" (Kitábu'l-Mubdá wa'l-Ma'ád), at the end of the section on Contingent Being:—

"A curious anecdete bath come to me which I have heard related.\(^1\) A certain physician presented himself at the court of one of the House of Saman, and was well received, and rose to so high a position of trust that he used to enter the women's apartments and feel the pulses of its carefully-guarded and closely-veiled inmates.

در کتاب مسداً و معاد در آخر نصل امکان وجود بادرهٔ ۲۰ منده ، منده النفس همیگوید adds نادرهٔ ۸ منودم که . . and reads . . که هنودم که . . and reads که . .

One day he was sitting with the King in the women's apartmente in a place where it was impossible for any [other] male creature to pass. The King demanded food, and it was brought by the handmuidous. One of these presided over the table. As she was placing it on the ground, she bent down.1 When she desired to stand upright again, she was anable to do so, but remained as she was, by reason of a rheumatic swelling of the joints.3 The King turned to the physician end said, 'Cure her at once in whatever way you can,' Here was no opportunity for any physical method of treatment, since for such no appliances were available. So the physician bethought himself of a psychical treatment, and bado them remove the veil from her head, whereon she made a movement. Then he bado them remove hor skirt,3 whoreon she raised her head and stood upright.

"What mothed of procedure was this?' enquired the King. 'At that juncture,' replied the physician, 'a rhoumatic swelling appeared in her joints. I hade them uncover her head, that perchance she might be ashamed, and might make some movement because this condition was displeasing to her. So the whole of her head and face was uncovered, and anger was apparent therein.' I then abandoned this, and ordered her skirt to be removed. She was filled with shame, and a flush of heat was produced within her, such that it dissolved the rheamatic humour. Then she stood apright, and, restored to her elect position, became sound once again.'

"Had this physician not been skilled in his act, he would never have thought of this treatment; and had he failed, he would have forfeited the King's regard. Hence a know-ledge of natural science 1 and an apprehonsion of its facts form a part of this subject."

[.] بجبة ربح علىظى كه در مفاصل او حادث آمد ' L. bos ا

I Literally "trousers," of the kind worn by women in the East.

Instead of عبر بكرفت (la's reading) A. has تعبر بديد آمد "sho underwent no change"

Anecdote xxxiv.

Another of the House of Saman, Amir Mangur b. Null b. Nasr,2 became afflicted with an ailment which grew chronic, and remained established, and the physicians were unable to cure it. So the Amir Mausur sont messengers to summen Muhammad b. Zakariyya of Ray to treat him. Muhammad b. Zakariyyá camo as far as the Oxus, but when he saw it he said: "I will not embark in the boat: Ged Most High saith, 'Do not east yourselves into peril with your own hands's; and, again, it is surely a thing remote from wisdom voluntarily to place one's self in so hazardous a position." Ero the Amir's messonger had gone to Bukhárá and returned, he had composed the treatise entitled Manguri. So when a notable arrived with a special led-horso, bringing a mossage intermingled with premises of reward, he handed this Manguri to bim, saying: "I am this book, and by this book thou canst attain thino object, so that there is no need of me."

When the book reached the Amír he was in grievous suffering, wherefore he sent a thousand dinars and one of his own private horses, saying: "Strive to move him hy all these kind attentions, but, if they prove fruitless, bind his hands and feet, place him in the boat, and fetch him across." So, just as the Amír had commanded, they urgently entreated Muhammad b. Zakariyyá, but to no perpose. Then they bound his hands and feet, placed him in the beat, and, when they had ferried him across the river, released him. Then they brought the led-horse, fully caparisoned, before him, and he mounted in the best

¹ So L., which reads طبيعي b, thuman nature."

² That is, Mausúr I. who reigned A.H. 360-366 (A.D. 961-976). This ansedete is given in the Akhilag-i-Jaldii (ed. Lucknow, A.H. 1283), pp. 168-170.

⁴ Qur'an, ii, v. 191.

⁴ See n. 1 on p. 110 supra.

of humours, and sot out for Bukhárá. And when they enquired of him, saying, "We feared to bring thee across the water lest thou shouldst cherish enmity against us, but thou didst not so, nor do we see thee vexed in heart," he replied: "I know that every year several thousand persons cross the Oxus without being drawned, and that I too should probably not be drowned; still, it was possible that I might perish, and if this had happened they would have continued till the Resurrection to say, 'A feelish follow was Mehammad b. Zakariyyá, in that, of his own free will, he embarked in a hout and so was drowned.' But when they bound me, I escaped all danger of censure; for then they would say, 'They bound the poor follow's hands and feet, so that he was drowned.' Thus should I have been excused, not blamed, in case of my being drowned."

When they reached Bakhara, he saw the Amir and bogan to treat him, exerting his powers to the utmost, but without relief to the patient. One day he came in before the Amir and said: "To-morrow I am going to try enother method of treatment, but for the carrying out of it you will have to sacrifice such-and-such a horse and such-and-such a mule," the two being both animals of note, so that in one night they had gone forty purusangs.

So next day he took the Amír to the het bath of Jú-yi-Múlíyán, outside the palace, leaving that borse and mule ready equipped and tightly girt in the charge of his own servant; while of the King's retinue and attendants he suffered not one to enter the bath. Then he brought the King into the middle of the het bath, and poured over him warm water, after which he prepared a draught and gave it to him to drink. And he kept him there till such time as the humours in his joints were matured.

Then he himself went out and put on his clothes, and, taking a kaife in his hand, came in, and stood for a while reviling the King, saying: "Then didst order me to be heard and cost into the beat, and didst conspire against my life. If I do not destroy there as a punishment for this, I am not Muhammad b. Zakariyyú!"

The Amir was furious, sprang from his place, and, partly from suger, partly from fear of the knife and dread of donth, roso to his feet. When Muhammand b Zakariyya saw the Amir on his feet, he turned round and went out fr an the bath, and he und his servant mounted, the one the horse, the other the mule, and turned their faces towards the Oxne. At the time of the second prayer they crossed the river, and halted nowhere till they reached Mery. When Muhammad b. Zakariyya reached Mery, he alighted, and wrote a letter to the Amir, saying: "May the life of the King be prolonged in health of body and offective command! According to agreement this servant treated his muster, doing all that was possible. There was, however, an extreme weakness in the natural caloric, and the treatment of the disease by ordinary means would have been a protracted affair. I therefore abandoned it, and carried you to the hot bath for psychical treatment, and administered a draught, and left you so long as to bring about a maturity of the humours. Then I angered the King, so that an increase in the natural caloric was produced, and it gained strength until those humours, already softened, were dissolved. But henceforth it is not expedient that a meeting should take place between myself and the King."

Now after the Amír had risen to his feet and Muhammad b. Zakariyyá had gone out, the Amír set down and at once faiuted. When he came to himself he went forth from the buth and called to his servants, saying, "Where has the physician gone?" They answered, "He came out from the bath, and mounted the horse, while his attendant mounted the mule, and went off."

Then the Amír knew what object he had had in view. So he came forth on his own foot from the hot bath; and tidings of this ran through the city, and his servants and retainers and people rejoiced greatly, and gave alms, and offered sacrifices, and held high festival. But they could not find the physician, seek him as they might. And on the seventh day Muhammad b. Zakariyyá's servant arrived, riding the horse and leading the mule, and presented the letter. The Amir read it, and was astonished, and excused him, and sent him a horse, and a robe of honour, and equipment, and a clonk, and arms, and a turban, and a male slave, and a handmaiden; and further commanded that there should be assigned to him in Ray from the estates of al-Ma'mún' a yearly allewance of two thousand dínárs and two hundred ass loads of corn. These marks of honour he forwarded to him by the hand of a trusty messenger, together with his apologies. So the Amir completely regained his health, and Muhammad b. Zakariyyá attained his object.

Anecdote xxxv.

Ma'mún Khwárazmsháh had an accomplished Minister named Abu'l-Hasan Ahmad b. Muḥammad. Ho was a man of learning and a friend of scholars, and consequently many philosophers and mon of crudition, such as Abú 'Alí b. Síná, Abú Sahl Masíhí, Abn'l-Hasan Khammár, Abú Naṣr 'Arráq, and Abù Rayhán [al-Bírúní], gathered about his court.

New Abú Naṣr 'Arráq was the nophew of Khwárazmsháh, and ia all branches of the exact sciences he was second only to Ptolomy the Philosopher; while Abú 'Alí [b Síná] and Abú Sahl Masíhí were the successors of Aristotle' in

The text has از املاک مأموں, but perhaps the last word is to be taken as meaning "settled," "tranquil."

² So in L., and so corrected in A. from "twelve thousand."

² See p. vili of the Preface to Sachan's translation of al-Birûni's Chronology of the Austin Nations, and the same scholar's article Zur Geschichte und Chronologie von Chiverezu in the Sitzungsberichte d. Wiener Akademie for 1863.

The first, second, and last of these learned men have been already mentioned. The third is probably Abu'l-Khuyr al-Hasan... Ibnu'l-Khammar (Wüstenfeld's Geschiehte d. Arab. Acrie, No. 115, pp. 58, 59), who died a.m. 381 (a.D. 991).

[&]quot; The tests have "of Arista and Aristalis," as though they were two different persons, instead of two forms of the same name.

the science of Philosophy, which includes all sciences; and Abu'l-Hasan Khammar was the third after Hippocrates and Galen in the science of Medicine. And all these were, in this their service, independent of worldly cares, and maintained with one another familiar intercourse and pleasant correspondence.

But Fortune, as is its custom, disapproved of this; though the King would not willingly have destroyed this happiness of theirs, or brought these pleasant days to an end. So a notable arrived from Sultán Mahmád Yaminu'd-Dawla with a letter, whereof the purport was as follows: "I have heard that there are in attendance on Khwárazmsháh soveral mon of learning, each anrivalled in his science, such as So-and-so and So-and-so. You most soud them to my court, so that they may attain the honour of attendance thereat. We rely on being enabled to profit by their knowledge and skill, and request this favour on the part of Khwárazmsháh."

Now the bearer of this message was Khwaja Hosayn 'Ali Mika'il, who was one of the most accomplished men of his age, and the wonder of his time amongst his contemporaries, while the prosperity of Saltan Yaminu'd-Dawla continued ever on the increase in the zenith of dominion and empire, and the kings of the time used to treat him with every respect and do him homage, and night and day lay down in feur of him. So Khwarazmshah eatertained Hasayn 'Ali Miká'il in the best of lodgings, and ordered him to be supplied with all auterials suitable for a prolonged stay; but, before according him an audience, he summoned the philosophers and laid before them the King's lotter, saying: "The King is strong, and has a large army recruited from Khorásán and India; and he covets 'Iráq. I cannot refuse to obey his order, or bo disobedient to his mandate. What say ye on this matter?"

They answered, "We cannot abandon thy service, nor will we in any wise go to him." But Abú Naṣr and Abu'l-Hasan and Ahú Rayḥán were eager to go, having heard accounts of the King's manificent gifts and presents. Then said Khwarazushah, "I will summon you before me, and do you take your own way." Then he equipped Aha 'Ala [b. Saa] and Aha Sahl, and arranged a plan for thom, and sent with them a guide, and they sot off through the desort towards Mazandaran.

100

Noxt day Khwarazushah accorded Husayn 'Ali Mika'il an audience, and heaped on him all sorts of compliments. "I have read the letter," said he, "and have acquainted myself with its contents and with the Kung's command, Ahu 'Ali and Ahu Sahl are gone, but I will provide equipment for Abu Naşr and Abu Rayhan and Abu'l-Hasan, so that they may enjoy the honour of entering that August Presence." So in a little while he provided their outfit, and despatched them in the company of Khwaja Husayn Mika'il to Balkh. So they came into the presence of Sultan Yaminu'd-Dawla, and joined the King's Court.

Now it was Ahú 'Alí [b. Sinú] whom the King chiefly desired. He commanded Abú Nusr the painter to draw his portrait on paper, and he ordered the other artists to make forty copies of the portrait, and these he despatched in all directions, placing them in the hands of porsons of note, to whom he said, "There is a mun after this likeness, whom they call Abú 'Alí h. Sinú Seek him out and send hus to me."

Now when Abú 'Alí and Ahú Sahl departed from Khwarazmshah, ore morning came they had travelled fifteen parasangs. When it was morning they alighted at a place where there were wells, and Abú 'Alí took up an astrological table to see under what ascendant they had started on their journey. "We shall lose our way," said he, "and experience hardships," Said Abú Sahl: "We acquiesce in God's decree. Indeed, I know that I shall not come safely through this journey, for in these two days the passage of the degree of my ascendant roaches Capricorn, and that is decisive, 1 so that no bape remains to me. Henceforth our intercourse of souls is ut an end." 2

دو ترکث A. adds the words ، شمارا پسش خوانم ' : I In's reading is . مشمارا پسش خوانم ا

³ Horo and elsewhore A has Herayu for Hazan.

² So A. L. has "Khwarazm."

Thou a wind aroso and clouds gathered. Abá 'Alí relstes os follows. On the fourth day a dust-storm arose, and the world was darkened. They lost their way, for the wind had obliterated the tracks. When the wind halled, their guide was a thousand times more astray than before; no water was obtainable; and, by reason of the heat of the desert of Khwarazm, Aha Sahl Musihi passed away to the World of Eternity. The guide turned hack, while Aba 'Alí, with a thousand hardships and difficulties, reached Abiward, whence be went to Tas, and finally beppened on Nishapar.

There he found a number of persons who were seeking for Abú 'Alí. He alighted in a quiet spot, where he abods several days, and there be turned his face towards Gurgáu. Qábús, who was king of that province, was a great and accomplished man, and a friend to men of learning. Abú 'Alí knew that there are harm would beful him. When he reached Gurgán, he alighted at a caravanseray. One day a person fell sick in his neighbourhood. Abú 'Alí treated him, and he get better. It is related that Abú 'Alí continued to live in Gurgáo, and that his income became considerable and went on increasing duy by day. Some time elapsed thus, until one of the relatives of Qábús fell sick. The physicians set themselves to treat him, striving and exerting themselves to the utmost, but the disease was not cured. Now Qábús wes greatly attached که تسییر در جهٔ طالع می درین دو روز بعیوق مسرسد The text has عمی درین دو روز بعیوق مسرسد (واو . [۵.] قاطع است ۲ میروز (واو . [۵.] قاطع است ۱ میروز (واو . [۵.] ق

² This last sentence is in A. only.

Qubus b. Washingir Shamsu'l-Ma'uli, reigned A.n. 366-371 and again A.n. 388-403. To him al-Biruni dedicated his Chronology of Ancient Nations. See Sachau's English translation of that work, Preface, p. viii.

[.] همی نگریست A. has در گرگان بزیست For La's reading to him. So one of the servants of Qábús did obcisance before him and said: "Into such-and-such a caravanseray buth entered o young man who is a physician, and whose efforts are singularly blessed, so that several persons have been cared at his hands." So Qábús bade them seek him out and bring him to the patient.

So they sought out Abu 'Alf and brought him to the siek man. He saw a youth of comely countenance, whereon tho hair had scarcely begun to show itself, and of symmetrical proportions. Ho sat down, felt his pulse, usked to see his urioe, inspected it, and said, "I want a man who knows all the districts and the quarters of this province." they brought ooe; and Abú 'Ali placed his hand on the putient's pulse, and bado the other montion the names of the different querters and districts of Gurgán. the man began, and continued until he reached the nome of a quarter at the montion of which, as he uttered it, the potient's pulse gave a strange flutter. Then Abú 'Alí said, "Now I must have someooo who knows all the streets in this quarter." They brought such an one. "Repeat," said Abú 'Alí, "the names of all the houses in this district," So he repeated them till he roached the name of a house at the montion of which the putient's pulse gove the same flutter. "Now," said Abú 'Alí, "I want solocone who knows all the households." They brought such an one. and he began to repeat their until he reached a nome at the meotion of which that same strange flutter was apparent.

Then said Abu 'Alf, "It is finished." Thereupon he turned to the coofidential advisors of Qábús, cod said: "This lad is in love with such-oud-such a girl, in such-ond-such a house, in such-and-such a street, in such-ond-such a quarter: the girl's face is the patient's cure." The patient, who was listening, heard what was said, and io shume hid his fuce beneath the clothes. When they made enquiries, it was oven as Abu 'Alf had soid.' Thou they reported this nuntter to Qábús, who was anuzed thereat and soid, "Bring him before ms." So Abú 'Alí h. Síná was brought before Qahas.

, E

¹ Compare the precisely similar nurrative in the first story of the first book of the Mathumei of Juliu'd-Diu Rdmi, and also a passage in the section of the Dhakhira-i-Khteurazmshdhi (Book vi, Guitar i, Juz' 2, ch. 3), of which this

Now Quhus had a copy of Abu 'Ali's portruit, which Yaminu'd Duwlo had sent to him. "Why, hore is Abu 'Ali ! " exclaimed he. "Yes, O most puissant l'rinco," replied the other. Thou Qahas came down from his throno, advonced soveral paces to meet Ahú 'Alí, embraced him, conversed genially with him, sut down hesido him, ond said, "O greatest and most accomplished philosopher of the world, exploin to me the rationale of this treatment!" "O Sire," answered Ahú 'Alí, "when I inspected his pulso and urine, I hecams convinced that his complaint was love, and that he had fallen thus sick through keeping his secret. Had I enquired of him, he would not have told me; so I placed my hand on his pulse while they repeated ia succession the names of the different quarters, and whom it came to the name of the quarter of his beloved, love moved him, and his heart was stirred, so that I knew she was a dweller in thet quarter. Thee I enquired the streets, ond when I rosoled the street in question that some movement occurred, ond I knew that she dwelt in that street. Then I enquired the names of the households in that street, and the sams phenomenon occurred when the house of his beloved was named, so that I knsw the house elso. Then they made mention of the names of its inhabitants, and when he heard the nome of his beloved, hs was greatly affected, so that I know the name of his sweetheast also. Then I told him my conclusion, and ho could not deny it, but was compelled to confess the truth."

is a translation:—"Now the lover's pulse is variable and integralar, especially when he sees the object of his affections, or hears her name, or gets tadings of her. In this way one can discover, in the case of one who canceals his love and the name of his beloved, who is the object of his passion, and that in the following way. The physician should place his foger on the pulont's pulse, and mangenedly order the names of those persons amongst whom it may be summed that his sweetheat is to be found to be repeated, whereopen it will appear iron the putent's behaviour who his beloved is and what her name is Aviceman (upon whom be field's Mercy) says: 'I have tred this plan, and have succeeded by it in finding out who the beloved object was.''

Qábús was greatly astenished, and indeed there was good reason for astonishment. "O most ominunt and most excellent philosopher of the world," said he, "both the lover and the beloved are the children of my sisters, and are cousins to one another. Choose, then, an auspicious moment that I may unite them in marriage." So the Master [Avicenna] chose a fortunate hour, and in it they were united, and that prince was cured of the ailment which had brought him to death's door. And thereafter Qábús maintained Abú 'Alí in the best manner pessible, and thence he went to Ray, and finally became minister to 'Ala'u'd-Dawla, as is well known in history.

Anecdote xxxvi.

The author of the Kamilu's-Sana'at 1 was physician to 'Adudu'd-Dawla 2 in Pars, in the city of Shinaz. Now in that city there was a porter who used to carry loads of four hundred and five hundred maunds on his hack. And every five or six months he would be attacked by headache, and become restless, remaining so for ten a days and nights. One time he was attacked by headache, and when soven or eight days had clapsed, he several times determined to destroy himself. At length one day this physician passed by the door of his house. The porter's brother ran to meet him, did reverence to him, and, conjuring him by God Most High, told him his brother's condition. "Bring him to me," said the physician. they called him before the physician, who saw that he was a big man, of bulky frame, wearing on his feet a pair of shoes each of which weighed a maund and a half. the physician asked for and examined his prine; after which, "Bring him with me into the open country," said 949-982).

So A., but L. has "two."

¹ See Brockelmann's Gisch, d. Asab. Litt., p. 237, No. 19. His name was 'Air b al-'Abbas al-Mapasi, and he died a H. 384 (A.D. 994).

The second prince of the House of Buwayh, reigned A.H. 388-372 (A.D.

he. They did so. On their arrival there, he bade his servent take the turban from his head, and cast it round Thou he ordered another servent to take the shoes off the porter's feet and kick him on the back of the nock. The portor's sons went, but the physician was a man of consideration, so that they could say nothing. Then the physician ordered his servant to throw the turban round his neck, to mount his horse, and to make the perter run round the plain. The servant did as he was bid. Blood began to flow from the porter's nostrils. eaid the physician, "let bim clone, that the blood may flow from him, for he stinketh worse than o corpse." The man foll asleep omidst the blood which flowed from his nose, and three hundred dirhams' weight of blood escaped from his nostrils. They bere him thence, and he slept for a day and o night, and his headache passed away ond never ogain rcturned.

Theo 'Adudu'd-Dawla questioned the physician as to the rationals of this treatment. "O King," he replied, "for some while the blood had congulated in his head, and it was impossible to relieve this congestion by means of bellodonno, so I devised another treatment, which proved successful."

Anecdote xxxvii.

Melancholia is a disease which physicians often fail to treat successfully, for, though all melancholic diseases are chronic, melancholia is a pathological condition which is [especially] slow to pass.

¹ Perhaps "congulated" is too strong a word for "in and we should rather translate "for some while he had suffered from congestion of the head" or "corebral congestion."

[&]quot; لا بارج (یارج EA., B. نا بارج (یارج explained as = بارج الرج or منب الثعلب الثعلب الثعلب الثعلب الثعلب الثعلب الثعلب المور or عنب الثعلب المور or منب الثعلب المور or منب الثعلب المور or منب الثعلب الثعل

Abu'l-Ilasan h. Yahya, in his work entitled the "Hippocratic Thorapeutics" (Mu'alaja-i-Buqratt), a book the like of which buth been composed by no one on the Art of Medicine, bath reckened up the leaders of thought, sages, physicions, scholars, and philosophers who have been afflicted by this disease, for there were meny of them; end he continues thus:—

"My master Abú Ja'far b. Muḥammad Abú Sa'd al-Nashewi, commonly known as Ṣarakh, related to me," says he, "on the authority of the Imam Shaykh Muḥammad b. al-'Aqil al-Qazwini, on the authority of the Amir Fakhru'd-Dawlu Kalinjar the Buwayhid, that one of the princes of the House of Buwayh was attacked by melanchely, and was in such wise affected by the disease that he imagined himself to have been transformed into a cow. Every day he would low like a cow, causing annoyance to everyone, and saying, 'Kill nee, so that e good stew may be prepared from my flesh'; until matters reached such a pass that he would eat nothing, and the physicians were unable to do him ony good.

"Now at this juncture Abu 'Ali (Avicenne) was prime minister, and the king 'Ala'u'd-Dawla Muhammad b. Washingir had the fullest confidence in him, and had entrusted into his hends all the affairs of the kingdom, and placed under his judgment and discretion all matters. And, indeed, since Alexander the Great, whose minister was Aristotle, no king had such a minister as Abu 'Ali. And during the time that he was minister, he used to rise up every morning before dawn and write a couple of pages of the Shifa. Then, when the true dawn appeared, he

¹ See Brockelmann's Ocech. d. Arah. Litt., p. 237, where his name is given as Abu'l-Rissan 'Ali b. Muhammad at-Tabari. He was court physician to the Buwayhid prince Ruknu'd-Dawla about a H. 360 (a.d., 970). MSS. of the work cited exist at Oxford, Munick, and in the India Office.

² A has Saidt.

[»] So all lexi». صرخ.

⁴ One of Avicenna's most colebrated works. See the British Museum Arabic Catalogue, p. 745a, and the Supplement to the same, No. 711, pp. 484, 485.

used to give audience to hie disciples, such as Kiya Ra'is Bahmauyar, Abu Mungur Zila,1 'Abdu'l-Wahid Jurjani, Sulayman of Dumaseus, and me, Ahn Kalinjur. We used to continuo our studies till the morning grew bright, and then perform our prayers behind him; and as soon as he came forth he was met at the gute of his house by a thousand mounted mon, comprising the dignitaries and notables, as well as such as had beens to crave, or were in difficulties. Then the minister would mount, and this company would attend him to the Government Offices. By the time he arrived there, the number of horsemen had reached two thousand. And there he would remain until the morning prayer, and when he retired for refreshment all that company etc with him. Then he took his midday siesta, and when he rose up from this he would perform his prayer, wait on the King, and remain talking and conversing with him until the next prayer; and in all metters of importance there was no third person between him and the King.

"Our object in narrating these details is to show that the minister had no leisure time. Now when the physicians proved unable to cure this young man, the King's intercession was sought, so that he might bid his minister take the case in hand. So 'Alá'u'd-Dawla spoke to him to this offect, and he consented. Then said he, 'Good tiding's to the patient, for the butcher has come to kill him!' When the patient heard thie, he rejoiced. Then the minister mounted his horse, and came with his retinue to the gate of the patient's house. Taking a knife in his hand, he entered with two ettendants, saying, 'Whore is this cow, that I may kill it?' The patient made a noise like a cow, meaning, 'He is here.' The minister bade them bind him hand and foot in the middle of the house. petient rnn forward icto the middle of the house and lay down on his right side, and they bound his hands and feet firmly, and 'Abú 'Alí thea came forward, rubbing the knives together, sat down, and placed his hand on his side, as is the custom of butchers. 'He is very loan,' said he, 'and not fit to be killed: he must cat fodder until he gets fat.' Then he rose up and came out, baving hidden them loose his hands and feet, and place food before him, saying, 'Eat, so that them mayst grow fat.' They did so, and he ate, and recovered his appetite, after which they administered to him drugs and draughts. 'This cow,' said Abú 'Alí, 'must be well fattened'; so the patient ate in the hope that he might grow fat and they might kill him; while the physicians applied themselves vigorously to treating him as the minister had indicated, and in a month's time he completely recovered."

All wise men will perceive that one cannot heal by such methods of treatment save by virtue of extreme excellence, perfect science, and unerring acumen.

Anecdote xxxviii.

In the reign of Mulikshah, and during part of the reign of Sultan Sanjar, there was at IIcrat a philosopher named Adib Isma'il, a very great and perfect man, who, however, derived his income from his receipts as a physician. By him many rare cures of this class were wrought.

One day ho was passing through the shoep-slayors' market. A butcher was skinning a sheep, and was cating the warm fat which he took from its belly.\(^1\) Khwaja Isma'il said to a grocor opposito him, "If at any time this fellow should dis, inform me of it before they lay him in his grave." "Willingly," replied the grocer. When five or six months had elapsed, one morning it was rumoured abroad that such-and-such a butchor had died suddonly without any premonitory illness. The grocer olso wont to offer his condolences. He found a number of people tearing their gorments, while others were consumed with grief, for the dead man was young, and had little children. Then he remembered the words of Khwaja Isma'il, and hastened to bear the intelligence to him. Said the Khwaja, "He has been a long time in dying." Then he arose, took his staff, went to the dead man's house, raised the sheet from the face of the corpse, and began to apply the remedies for apoploxy. On the third day the dead man arose, and, though he remained peralytic, he lived for many years, and men were astenished, for that great men hed seen from the first that he would he stricken hy apoplexy.

¹ So in L. A has: "And every now and then he would put his hand into the sheep's beloy, pull out some of the warm int, and swallow it."

Anecdote xxxix.

The Shaykhu'l-Islám 'Abdu'lláh Ansárí (may God sanctify his spirit!) conceived a fanatical hetred of the above-mentioned man of science, and several times attempted to do him an injury, and burned his hooks. Now this fanatical dislike arose from religious motives, for the people of Herát believed that he could restore the dead to life, and this helief was injurious to his own pretensions.

Now the Shaykh fell ill, and in the course of his illness the death-rattle become apparent. However much the physicians treated him, it evoiled nothing. They were in despair, and so sent a sample of his urine to the Khwája under the name of another, and requested him to prescribe. When he had inspected it, he said: "This is the urine of se-and-se, in whom the denth-rattle has become apparent, and whom they are unable to treat. Bid them pound together a sir of pistachio-skins and a sir of the sugar called 'askari and give it to him, so that he may recover; and give him this message: 'You should study science, and not hurn men's books.'"

ا سکته ۱

^{*} So B. and L. (ادعوى), but A. reads مرام , "was injusous to the common folk."

[.] پوست A. hea مين د twico, and adds يک عاب عالم د يک

So they made a confection of these two ingredients, and the patient ato it, and immediately the death-ruttle ceased, and he recovered.

Anecdote xl.

In the time of Galen, one of the notables of Alexandria was attacked by pain in the finger-tips, and suffered great restlessness, being deburred from all repose. They informed Galen, who prescribed an unguent to be applied to his shoulders. As soon as they did this he was cured. Then they questioned Galen, saying, "What was [the rationale of] this treatment which then didst adopt?" He replied: "This, that the source of a psin which nttacks the finger-tips is the shoulder. I treated the root so that the branch might be cured."

Ancodole xli.

In the year A.u. 547 (= A.D. 1152-3), when a battle took place at Daráward hetween the King of the World Sanjar b. Maliksháh and my master 'Alá'u'd - Dawla al - Husaya (may God imaterialize their roigas!), and the Ghúrid army was so grievously smitten by the ovil eye, and I wandered about Herát in hiding, because I was connected with the House of Ghúr, and their eaemies uttered all manner of accusations against them, and rojoiced malignantly over their reverse; in the midst of this state of things, I say, I chanced one night to be in the house of a certain nehle man. When he had eaten bread, I went out to satisfy a need. That noble man, by leason of whom I came to be there, was praising me, saying: "Men know bim as a poet, but, apart from his skill in poetry, he is a man

L. has "447," both in figures and writing, an evident error, since Sanjar reigned A is 511-552, and 'Ala'u'd-Din Husayu "Jaháu-súz" A is. 544-556. A. omits the figures, and only has "in the year forty-soven."

See B. de Meyaard's Nict. de la Perse, p. 228, but this reading is conjectural. L. has 2,1,2, A. &,1,2.

[.] لشكر غوررا چنان چشم زخمى افتاد ٥

of great attainments, well skilled in astrology, medicine, polite letter-writing, and other accomplishments."

When I returned to the company, the master of the house showed me much respect, as do those who are in need of some favour, and sat by me for a while. "O so-und-so," said he, "I have one only daughter, and, save her, no other near relative, and she is my treasure. Lately she has fallen a victim to a malady such that during the days of her menthly courses ten or fifteen sirs! of sunguineous matter come from her, and she is greatly wenkened. We have consulted the physicians, several of whem have treated her, but it has availed nothing, for if this issue be stopped, she is attacked with pain and swelling in the stomach, and if it be renewed, it is increased in amount, and she is much weakened, so that I fear its cessation, lest her strength should wholly decline." "Send me word," said I, "when next this state occurs."

When ton days had passed, the patient's mother came to fotch mo, and brought her daughter to me. I saw a girl very comely, but despairing of life, and stricken with terror. She at once fell at my feet, saying: "O my father! For God's sake help me, for I am young, and have not yet seen the world." The tears sprang to my eyes, and I said, "Bo of good choor, this is an easy matter." Then I placed my fingers on her pulse. I found the artery strong, and her colour and complexion normal. It was at this time the season of summer, and most of the conditions of an enjoyable life were present, such as a robust habit of body, a strong constitution, a healthy complexion, age, season, country, and occupation. Then I summoned a philobotomist

¹ A. has "manuads."

[:] A. has . و اگر باز شود زیاد میرود . . . Tr. has ه و اگر می کشایند سیلان می افتد . .

[،] امور عشرة . A , امور عشرت . L ·

[•] For L.'s reading, بوبلد , A. has:

و هوای بکد (بلدع) و عادت و اعراض ملایمه ؟ and bodo him open the basilio vein in both her arms; and I sent away all the women. The bad blood continued to flow, end, by pressure and manipulation, I took from her a thousand dirhams' weight of blood, so that sho foll down Then I bade them bring fire, and prepare in a swoon. roasted meat beside her, until the house was filled with the smoke of the reasting meat, and it entered her nestrils. Then she came to her senses, moved, groaned, and asked Then I prepared for her a gentlo stimulant, for a drink. and treated her for a week, and she recovered, and that illness passed away, and her monthly courses resumed their And I called her my daughter, and normal condition. to-day sho is to me as my other children.

Conclusion.

My object in writing this treatise and in setting forth this discourse is not to make mention of my merits or to show forth my services, but rather to guide the begianer, and to glorify my Lord, the learned and just King, Husamu'd-Dowla wa'd-Din, Holper of Islam and the Muslims, Pride of monsrchs and kings, noblest of mankind, Shamsu'l-Ma'ali, Maliku'l-Umará, Abu'l-Hasan 'Alí b. Mas'nd b. al-Husayn, Nusratu Amiii'l-Mú'minin (may God porpetuate his glory!), by whose high station the Kingly Office is magnified. May God (blessed and glorious is Ifo!) continue to embellish it by his Beauty, and may the Divine Protection and Heavenly Grace be a buckler over the form and stature of both, and may the heart of my Lord and Benefactor Fakhrn'd-Dawla wa'd-Din, Bahá'u'l-Islám wa'l-Muslimin, Kiag of the kings of the mountains, be rejoiced, not for a while but for over, by the continuance of both!

Concluding Note by the Editor of the Tihran ed. of A.M. 1305 (= A.D. 1887-8).

In the beneficent roign of the Sovereign Lord¹ of the nations, the King of kings who is like unto Alexander in pomp, the Romembroneer of Kisrá and Jomshíd, the Monorch of monarchs, the Shadow of God in the lands, by the rogards of whose weighty mind all the sciences and arts eojoy the fullest ascendency, and the votaries of every sort of eraft and cuaning possess the most brilliant position, the King, con of a king and grandson of a king, and the Prince, son of a prince and groodson of a prince, Sháh Náshru'd-Din Qájár (may God prolong his Power, and extend his Life and his Reign!)—

"O King, who resemblest the Angels in exaltation, Whose name is held in fair renown by the Supreme Host?"

By the auspicious traits of his nature the treatises of men of culture, which had been clothed in the reiment of oblivion, have become adorned with the ornament of print, while the dust of desolation has been removed from the senses of meo of learning. Amongst such treatises is this Chahar Magala of 'Arudi, whereof, until this time, the virgin sentences were hidden behind the curtain of concealment, and the moiden anecdotes lay latent ond unknown in the leaves. This servant of the Heaven-high Court and house-hred slave of this Immortal Dynasty, Muhammad Bágir Khán, son of the late Hájí Muhammad Báqir Khán, Begler-bogi, the Qájár, who has devoted most of his time to the transcription of written pages, undertook, at the desire of his High Reverence Mulla 'Ali Khwansari, to transcribe this also. Two manuscripts were exemined, of which the one had been copied from the other. In the one there were bad mistakes, and in the other weree. was as though a heap of gold hod been acquired, but filled with alloy and dross. Thus, amongst other errors, was written, and حصر, calcalanted. Therefore, to the utmost of my power, I applied myself, while transcribing the book, to correcting as far as possible the words and sentences occurring in it. My prayer of my spiritual friends, who are the changers of the coins of ideas, is that if a chance mistake occur, or an erroneous idea or word appear, they will overlook it with gracious eyes, and will endeavour to read such correction into the text.

¹ Literally " Master of the necks"

At the time of concluding, a chronogram expressing the date [of publication] occurred to me, and is here submitted:

By the desire of Akhund-i-Mulla 'Ali Khwansari, A.R. 1305, and by the care of His Rovoronce Abu'l-Qasim, the noble heir of Akhund-i-Mulla Muhammad.

¹ The meaning is: "The Book of the Four Discourses hath been correctly printed in its entirety." The numerical values of the letters composing this sentence, when added up, give 1305.

INDEX OF PERSONS, PLACES, AND BOOKS.

Abayardi, 08.
Ibna'l-'Ahbadi (Aba 'Asim Muhammad b. 'Ali), 25.
Abu'l-'Ahbas b. 'Abbas, 45.
'Ahbasid-, 30, 34, 37.
'Abdu'l-'Ianail, 25.
'Abdu'l-'Wabad Jurjani, 127.
'Abdu'l-'Wabad Jurjani, 127.
'Abdu'l-'Wabad Jurjani, 127. 'Abdu'llúh Ansári, 129. 'Abdu'r-Razziq, 83. Abluard, 121. Abluardi, 25. 'Adudu'd-Dawlu, 5, 124, 125. A framyab, 83. Aghiad, 110. Ahmad b. 'Abdu'l-'Azlz, Imam-, 30. Ahmad 'Abdu'l-Jalil-i-Sajzi, 80. Ahmad b. 'Abdu'llah-1-Khujistunl, 3, 43-44. Ahmad Parrukh, 110. Ahmad IIasan-i-Maymandl, 3, 25, 33, 80, 94. Ahmad Khalaf, 48. Aklılaq-i- Jaláli, 115, n. 'Ala'n'd-Dawla 'Ali Faramarz, 88-70. 'Ala'u'd-Dawla Muhammad b. Wushimgir, 124, 126, 127. 'Alà'u'd-Din Husayn Jahansûz, 2, δ, 10, 48, 104, 130. Alexander the Great, 126, 133. Alexander the Great, 126, 133.
Alexandria, 130.
'Ali b. 'Abbia al-Majūni, 124.
'Ali b. Abi Tālib, 81, 82.
'Ali Daylam, 79, 80.
'Ali Farāmars, Amir—, 83, 89, 70.
'Ali Farāmars, Amir—, 83, 134.
'Ali h. Layth, 43, 44.
Abū 'Ali Muḥammad. Seo Bal'ami.
'Ali b. Muḥtāj, Amir—, 26.
'Ali Pānidbi, 48, 70.
'Ali Sbatianji, 47.
'Ali Sipihri, 47, 70. 'All Sipihei, 47, 70. 'All $66, 47. Alp Arslan, 08. Alp Ghazl, 75.

Alptagin, 26, 27, 38, 39.

'Ani'aq of Bukhu'a, 4, 46, 75-77.

'Ani'd As'ad, 60, 85.

'Ani'd Safiyyu'd Din Aha Bakr Muhammad b. al-Husaya Rawaushahl, Amir—, 85-87.

'Amr b. Layth, 43.
Aristotle, 111, 118, 120.

'Ariqi, Abu Nayr—, 118, 119, 120.

'Asjadi, 46.

Asjadil, 46.

Asjadil, 48. Armarina, 90. Ibnn'l-Athir, 43. Atrix, 38. Avicenna, 6, 94, 07, 107, 110-113, 118-121, 126-128. 'Awfi, Muhammad—, 6. Aynx, 3, 56-58. Azraqi, 4, 71-72, 81. Badakhahan, 84. Badahis, 51, 53. Badi'-i-Hamndani, 24, 26. Badihi, 71. Baghdad, 37, 91, 162, 112. Bahmanyar, Kiya Ra'is—, 127. Rahrami of Sarukha, 46, 60. Bahramsbah (Ghaxawid), 48.

Aba Bakr Daqqaq, 108.

Aba Bakr Lshaq, Iman.—, 84.

Aba Bakr "the younger," 110.

Baltani, 25.

Balkh, 86, 89, 91, 100, 101, 120. Bamiyan, 104. Harbad, 45. Barmecidos, 34. Bars-jau (?), 30. Bashahar-i-Marghazi, 48. Bayand, House of-, 81. Ramardi, 98. Bayanani, Amir—, 38. Bayhaq, 29, 44. Bazh, 77. Biráni, Abá Rayhán—, 4, 88-90, 92-05, 118-120. Brut of Layamon, 70, n.

Bughra Khan, 3, 41, 42.
Bukhara, 20, 29, 38, 39, 46, 51, 53, 54, 55, 118.
Bukht-Yishu', 5, 112-113.
al-Bundari's History of the Selfage, passim in fooluates.
Burhal, 46, 57, 00.
Barkala, 47.
Burdan, 55.
Buwayh, House of—, 121, 126. See also Daylam, House of—.
Buzurjmihr of Qa'in, 46.

Chula (ar Iúla), Rest-house of—, 61. Chighúni, Amir Abu'l-Mudhaffar—, 59, 60, 63, 65. Chighúniyan, 59, 00.

Dahistan, 47.
Dakhm, 108.
Daqiqi, 65.
Daqiqi, 65.
Daqiqiq, Abd Bakr—, 108.
Darward, 130.
Darward, 52.
Da'ad Abd Bakr, Amir—; 90, 97, 98.
Da'ddi, 4, 00, 98.
Dawlatshih, 1, 6, and passim in footnotes.
Daylam, 'Ali—, 70, 80.
Daylam, 'House of—, 28. See also Buxayh, House of—.

Buwaya, Rouse of—. Dhakhira, 110. Dhakhira-i-Khwaxazmshahi, 110, 122– 123.

Dhn'r-Riyksataya, 34. Abú Dulaf, 79, 60.

> Egypt, 30. Euclid, 68.

Eagl b. Sahl, 34, 35, 37.
Fakhru'd-Dawla Aba Kalinjar, 126.
Fakhru'd-Diu Mas'ad b. 'Izzu'd-Din Hasan (Gharid), 8, 9.
Abu'l-Faraj of Raua, 40.
Farkhari, 46.
Farrukh, Ahmad—, 110.
Farrukhi, 3, 46-47, 58-66.
Fasa, 71.
Firdawsi, 1, 4, 0, 25, 48, 48, 49, 77-84.
Firdri-1-Fakhri, 47.
Fasal-i-Bupat, 100.

Ginlen, δ, 110, 119, 130. Ganja, 47. Ghada'iri, 46. Ghayatu'l-Arūdiyyin, 60. Ghazna, 32, 33, 42, 44, 40, 46, 60, 81, 83, 02.
Ghazna, Howe of—, 40.
Ghazna (P), 25.
Ghlyfilmid-Din. See Muhammad b. Malkahdh.
Ghar, House of—, 2, 5, 6, 6, 47, 101, 130.
Ghara, 52.
Gulabi, 40.
Gulabid (P) grapes, 52.
Gulabi, 40.
Gulabid (P) grapes, 52.
Gur Khan, 3, 38-39.
Gurgan, 45, 47, 121, 122.
Gashyar-i-Jill (or Jubali), 69, 90.

Ha'ly b. Quiayha, 70, 80.
Hamadini, 25.
Hamadi, 24.
Hamidi, 25.
Haudhala of Badghis, 43.
Abu Hamidi, 1skhi, 40.
Hanini, 71.
Harhi, 25.
Abu'l-Hasan Almad b. Muhammad, 116.

Abu'l-Hasan al-'Ajl, 45.
Abu'l-Hasan al-'Ajl, 45.
Abu'l-Hasan 'All b. Man'úd b. Fakhru'dDawla Muhammad, 2, 8, 132.
Abu'l Hasan Khammad, 118, 110, 120.

Abu'l-Hasan Khammar, 118, 110, 120. Abu'l-Hasan Kisa'i, 20, 27, 45. Abu'l-Hasan b. Yabya, 12d. Mrsan b. Sahi, 34, Mand Hashim, 91, 112.

Ibrahlm, Sultan—of Chazna, 4, 48, 72, 74.

Tiak Rhtns. Seo Khdgén, House of—.
India, 119.

'Iraq, 51, 72, 87, 91, 119.
Islahan, 55, 70, 102, 112.
Islandiyar, 64.
Lefandiyar, 64.

lsfandiyar, 64.

Ibn Isfandiyar, 2, 77.

Isfarbyini, Tho son of—, 70.

lsfarbyini, Imam Mudhaffar-i-—, 100.

Isha the Jow 87

Ishiq the Jow, 87.

Abd Ishiq Jaylari, 45.

Ishit, Ami Hanifa—, 46.

Ishif, 3, 25, 26–30.

Islip-i-Qinin, 111.

Isma'il b. 'Abbad, 3, 24, 31, 32. Isma'il, Adib—, 5, 128-129. Isma'il Jurjanf, Sayyid—, 110, 112. Isma'il Wanid, 91. 'Izzu'd-1)lu Mahmad, 105.

Jakari-Hamadani, 47.

Aba Ja'lar b. Muhammad Aba Sa'd an- . Nashawi, called Sarakh, 126. Jaliansaz. Seo 'Ald'a'd-Din Husayn. Julalu'd-Din Ruini, 122, a. Julinus. Son Gulen. Jaml'.i-Shabi, 90. Jamshid, 188. Juwbari, Abû Bakr—, 47. Juwbari-i-Zaigaz, 47. Jayy, 103. Juit, 77. Juligh, 68.

Jū-yi-Muliyan, 54, 116.

Kathyati of Ganja, 47. al-Kali. See Ismo'il b. 'Abbid. Kakl, 28. Kalila wa Dhana, 71.

Aba Kalinjar, 126. Kamali, 'Amid—, 47. Kamilu's-Sana'at, 5, 110, 124. Kanzu'l-Khfiya, 50.

Karkhani, 47. Karúkh, 44, 51. Káyāni, 40. Kaykā'āa b. Iskandar b. Qābás, 24.

Khabbazi, 46. Khafiyyu'l-'Ala'i, 112.

Khalaf, Abmad, 46, 58. Khamar, Abril-Hasan, 118, 119, 120. Khan-i-Nishapar, 44. Khaqan, House of 46, 76. Khayyam. See 'Umar.

Khidr Khan b. Ibrabim, 75, 77.

Khujistán, 43. Khuristan, 6, 27, 29, 37, 43, 44, 51, 75, 87, 91, 103, 119. Khūzán, 97.

Khwai, 44. Khwar, 28.

Khwarazm, 121. Khwarazmehiha, 38, 118, 119, 120.

Kifaya (of Ahmad Farrukh), 110. Kifaya (of Iba Sandúna), 112. Kirmanshab, 37.

Kidi'l, 28, 27, 45. Kiara, 133.

Kuhlatan, 28. Kamish, 28. 1

Kunduri, Abu'n-Nusr-, 25.

Kasa Fali, 47.

Abu Lahub, 31.

Langhan, 3, 32, 33, 34. Limit of Dahistan, 47.

Laguni, 24. Laguritu'i-Mararif, 34, n. Lapamon, Brut ef—, 70, a. Labab of 'Awfi, passim in footnotes.

Lughat-i-Asadi, passim in footnotes.

Lúla 1, 46.

Abu'l-Ma'ali of Ray, 47.

Mabda wa Ma'ad (of Avicouna), 113.

nl-Magori, 89.

Mahmud Da'udl, 4, 98-98. Mahmud b. Mas'ud, Shaman'd-Din-, of Ghar, 104. Mahmad Sayfu'd-Dawla (of Ghazna),

72, 74. Mahmud Yaminu'd-Dawla b. Sabukfagla, Sultan—, of Ghazna, 3, 4, 33, 41, 48, 40, 56, 58, 66, 80-84, 92-04, 110, 120, 123.

Majdf (P Mujallidi), 45.

Majma-u'l-Fusaha, 7. n.

nl-Najdsi, 'All b. al-'Abbas-, 124, n. Makan, 3, 28, 29.

Malikshéh, 67, 72, 73, 76, 129. Málin, 51, 52, 53.

al-Ma'mun (Caliph), 3, 34-37, 90, 01, 112, 1187

Ma'mun Khwarazmahah, 118. Manshuri, 48.

Abû Manşûr (poet), 71, 72. Abû Manşûr Bagbûdû, 88. Manşûr b. Nûh (Manşûr I), 26. Manşûr b. Nûh b. Naşr (Manşûr II), 115-118.

Aba Manşar Zila, 127. Manşari, Tibb-i--, 110, 116. Manachibri, 46.

Magamat, 25. Marghazar-i-Sapid, 51.

Mash'il (of Hunnyn b. Ishing), 109.

Abd Ma'shar, 89, 92. Masihi, Abd Sahl—. See Abu Sahl. Masihi b. Mahmud, Sultan — o

Mahmud, Sultan - of Ghazna, 48.

Mar'ad-i-Sa'd-i-Salman, 4, 46, 72-75. Mas'údi (poet, of Ray), 46.

Abu'l-Mathal (poet), 46. Mathnawi, 122, n. Má wara'n'n-Nahr. See Transozania. Mawsilf, 4, 98-99.

Maymandi. Seo Ahmad Hasan. Mazandaran, 53, 55, 78, 120. Merv, 48, 84, 87, 101, 117.

Mihrgan, 62, 53. Mika II, Husayn 'Alt., 119, 120. Mirkhwand, 38, n.

Moses, 65, 01.

Mu'filaja-i-Buqrati, 126. Mudlaffar (of Pany-dih), 46.
Abá'l-Mudlaffar Chighani, 66, 63, 66.
Mudhaffar-i-Isladari, 100.
Muhammad 'Abd, 25.
Muhammad b. 'Abda'liáh (socretary to Bughra Khan), 3, 42. Muhammad b. 'Aqil al-Qazwini, 120. Muhammad Daqir Khin, 133. Muhammad Daklim, 108. Muhammad b. Mulikshih (Seljuq), 75, 97, 102. Muhammad b. Mansor al-Haddad, 25. Muhammad Aba Nasr (poet), 46. Muhammad Zakuriyya-yi-Ituzi. Soo Mu'izzi, 4, 0, 47, 65, 67-70, 83. Mujullidi (? Majdi) of Gurgán, 43. Mukhtánt. Uthmán—, 46. Muqri, 90-97. Muralid (of nr-Razi), 166. Mashkan, 74. al-Mustadhlur, 37-38, 102. al-Mustanhid, 3, 87-38. al-Mustanhid, 25. Mu'tazilites, 80. Najibi (of Farghina), 40, 76. Najjur-i-Sugharchi, 40, 76. Nariman, 78. an-Nashawi, 120. Nasimi, 71. Naşiru'd-Din Qajar, 133. Nisiru'd-Din Sabuktagin (of Ghazan), Namua, 2, 18-10. Nașe b. Abmad (Samanid), 28, 51-55. Aba Nagr 'Arraq, 118, 119, 126. Aba Nagr Kunduri, 26. Aba Nagr, Muhammad— (poet), 46. Aba Nagr (painter), 126. Aba Nagr of Pars, 74.

Namus, 2. 18-19.
Namus, 2. 18-19.
Namus, 2. 18-19.
Namus, 28, 51-55.
Abū Namus, 218, 119, 120.
Abū Namus, Muhammad— (poet), 46.
Abū Namus, Muhammad— (poet), 46.
Abū Namus, Muhammad— (poet), 46.
Abū Namus, 126.
Abū Namus, 25.
Namus, 25.
Namus, 26.
Namus, 27, 73.
Nichāmi-i-'Arūdi, 2, 5, 10, 47, 85-87, 175, 133.
Nichāmi-i-'Arūdi, 2, 5, 16, 47, 85-87, 175, 133.
Nichāmi-i-Mumi, 85, 88.
Nichām

Pishdadi, 40. Piolemy, 118. l'artin, 34-37. Qúbús b. Washingir, 121-124. Qabas-nama, 24. (lajar, 123. Qanan (of Avicenna), 167, 116, 111. Qanan-i-Mas'adi, 60. Quebrani, 40. Aha'l-Qadm Da'all, 00. Abu'l-Qosim h. Mulla Mubammad, 134. Qashuu Amfri'l-Monualu, 102. Quawin, 67. Qubadiyan, 69. Ibn Qudama, 24. Qum, 31. Qumis, 28. Quart of Gurgan (poet), 47. Qur'an, 3, 26, 27, 39-40, 109. Quashi, Amii Aba 'Aishi'llah—, 71. Quashi, Amii Aba 'Aishi'llah—, 71. Quashi, Ommahaomad (of Ghai), 48. Qutulmudi, 76. Raddia, 80, 81. Ratt'i, Abu'l-Qasim- (poet), 47. Raff'i of Nishapar (poet), 47. Rashidi (pout), 40. Rashidi of Samarquad (poet), 4, 46, Rawfushihi, 'Amid— (q.v.), 85-87. Ray, 28, 31, 124. Aba Rayban. Seu Birkel. Razan (gaio of Tas), 84. ar-Razi, Muhammad b. Zakariyya---, 5, 109, 110, 112, 116-118. Ribat-i-Sangin, 44. Aba Rida b. 'Abdu's-Salam, 18. Right-quit Khan, 7, n.

Aba Rija, dihqan, 55.

Aba Rija, Shah--, 46.

Radsgi, 3, 6, 25, 45, 51-56, 60.

Radbar (gate of Tas), 84. Rustam, 55. Sabi, 24. Sabuktagia, 20, 48. Aba Sa'd, Ami —, 100. Sad Bab (of Aba Sahl Masihi), 110. Sad Bab (of as-Sojri), 88. Aba Sa'd b. Handa Zayuu'l-Mulk, 55. Şadaqa, 102, 103. Sa'di, 47. Sadiu'd. Din Muhammad b. Mudhaffar, 101. Saffacids, 43-44. Sägharchi (Na jar-i--), 40, 7%. Ilm Said Masibi, 110, 118, 120, 121.

Aba Sa'id as-Sajzi, 85.

Ilin Salam (or Salami), 44.

- And the same á

No. 15.05 - 15.5 L.

Saman, House of ... 26, 28, 45, 51, 53, 113, 115. Samarqand. 6, 38, 46, 51, 55. Samnan, 28. Sana'l, 40. Ibn Sundana, 112. Sanjar b. Malik-hah, 6, 37, 38, 66, 97, 104, 128, 130. Sarakh, 126. Sainklis, 40. Sistin, Heuso of-, 46, 45. Sayfu'd Dawle, Mahmud-, 72, 74. Sayfa'd Din Sari, 48. Sayyidu'r-Ru'asa, 26. Seljáq, Housa of—, 3, 6, 37, 38, 47, 56, 71. Shahrima, 48, 78, 79, 81, 82. Shahriyar b. Sharain, 81. Shamen'd-Din Mahmud b. Mas'ad (Gharid), 104-165. Shamsu'd-Din Muhammad (Gharid), 2, 8, 9. Shausah, House of—, 8, 47. Shartf-i-Mujallidi, 45.

Shi iites, 82. See also Refigis. Shiras, 124. Shiras, 24, Sipahhed—, 81, 83. Shija'i (of Fash), 71. Shija'u'l-Ilukama, 98. Shuja'u'l-Mulk, 98. Sighani. See Chighani. Simjar, 26. Smnak, 28.

Shatranji, 'Ali- (noet), 47.

Shihabu'd-Din Quinlmush, 75.

Shifa, 89, 128.

Shihabi (poot), 47.

Sim-that, 77. Sinh. See Avicenna. Sipihrl, 'Alf— (poet), 47, 76. Sistan, 53, 58, 56, 66, 65. Sitta 'ashar (of Galou), 116. Sulaymun of Damescus, 127.

Tubagát-i-Núsiri, 8, n. Tubagát-i-Shu'ark (di Ibn Salum), 44. Tabarán, 78, 84. Tuberistan, 81. Tabazistan, Ibu Islandiyar's History of -, 2, 47, 77. at Tabrizi, Fadl h. Histim—, 89.
Tadáruk (of Aviconna), 112.
Talhím (of al-Biráni), 88.
Talhím (poet). 46.
Táhir 'All of Múshkán, 74. Takmila (of Abu Mansur), 88. Taurchaj, 18. Tarikh-i-Guzida, 30, n. Turniyan (grapes), 52. Tarun, 66. Tush, 28, 29. Tha alibi, 34. Thabit b. Qurm, 88, 110. Thiquin'l-Mulk, 74. Tilib-l-Mansari, 110, 115. Tirmidh, 59. Tisha, The see of 47. Transoxania, 29, 38, 41, 42, 59, 75, 77, 87, 07.
Tughan Shah, 4, 71, 72. Tuhfata'l- Mulák (of ar-Rází), 112. Turkistan, 75. Tus, 6, 66, 77, 80, 81, 83, 84, 98, 121.

Umar Khayjam, 1, 2, 4, 6, 100-162, 'Unguri, 3, 25, 46, 48, 57, 68. Uthmun Mukhtari, 46.

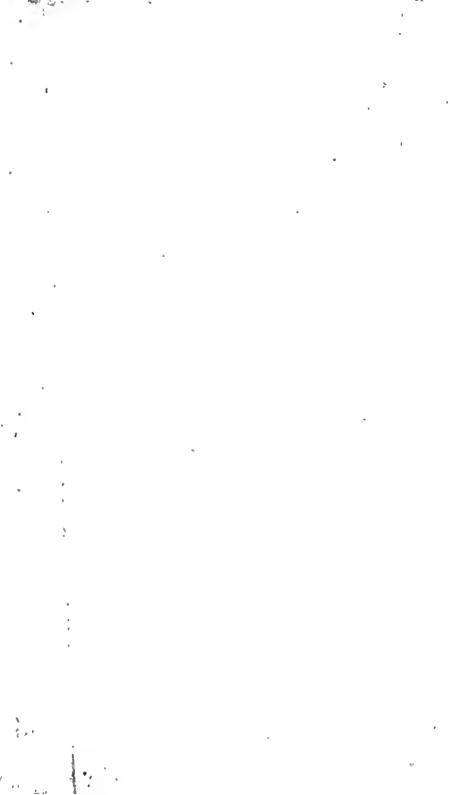

Vajiristan, 72.

Walid b. Mughira, 40. Warsh, 87.

Yadigar (of Sayyid Isma'll Jurjani), Yaliya b. Akthani, 34, 36. Yamini'd-Dawla. Soo Mahmid. Yn'quh b. lehug al-Kindl, 4, 90-62. Ya'qub b. Layth, 43, 44. Yashb, 44. Yazdigird, 81. Ahú Yúsul (poet), 71, 72.

> Zabulistan, 26. Zál, 78. Zaynab, The Lady-, 76. Zavnati (poet), 46. Zavnu'i-Malk, 55. Zilo, Abu Mangur-, 127.

CATALOGUED.

"A book that is shut is but a block"

COVT. OF INDIA

Please help us to keep the book clean and moving.